Congressman Miller's Weekly Letter

Reaction from the McArthur Letters. I have been deeply interested in the reaction that resulted from the publication of my correspondence with General McArthur. I was not so much interested in what the radio commentators and news columnists said, for most of these had already committed themselves to certain candidates, and so would have to uphold their predictions. I was much more interested in the many letters received from people in all parts of the country. I estimate that about 10% of them were of the smear type, vicious, malignant and unsigned. About 15% asked questions and expressed doubt. A good 75% were enthusiastically favorable. Such expressions as the following were the most numerous: "An experienced General in the White House will shorten the war." "The General knows diplomacy and foreign affairs." He will help write an American peace." "He will deal firmly with selfish blocks and groups seeking to destroy this country."

As an humble member of Congress and of the republican party I felt it my duty to settle in my own mind the question of who would be the most outstanding and experienced man the party could nominate. It must do that if it expects the people to entrust the affairs of the country to it for the next four years. I reached the conclusion that General McArthur was that man. His outstanding success in his military career fits him to do the biggest job now before us. His experience as Chief-of-Staff, and earlier as aide to President Theodore Roosevelt, gave him experience in the executive branch. He knows the leaders of the nations of the world. He is a student of history and a believer in the American People. The war in Europe may well be over before he would take office. Who better than General McArthur could lead us to victory against the Japs?

Criticism of my judgment and motives in releasing this correspondence for publication has been expressed. In my speech in the house on April 18 I said: "I take full responsibility for my act and ask that criticism for it be directed entirely at me." I knew General McArthur would not seek the nomination and I believed that in times like these the nomination should seek the man. Unless a popular demand is aroused this could not happen. That there was a broad interest is attested by the fact that the correspondence was published in practically every daily newspaper in the nation and was commented on by almost every columnist and radio news commentator. Like General McArthur said in his letter to me, "I am a firm believer in the people and if given the truth they can be depended upon to meet any national crisis." I firmly believe this nation faces such a crisis in its prosecution of the war, its relations with its allies and neighbors and in its domestic problems.

The Constellation. A visit, by special invitation, to see the Constellation, America's largest and fastest transport plane which crossed the United States from Burbank, Cal., to Washington in six hours and fifty-six minutes, was most interesting. Built to carry 57 passengers after the war it can circle the globe in less than three days. It will now be used by the Army to carry 100 paratroopers. These planes by annihilating space and time may well be a factor in bringing about a better understanding between all the peoples of the earth. Nebraska with its many airports should have a major part in this march of progress.

Old Time Inman Resident Dies Suddenly in Lincoln
 Word was received here by relatives and friends last Wednesday, April 19, of the very sudden death of Cleve Roe, of Lincoln. Up until eight years ago he with his family lived in Inman and had for years. The body was brought here for the funeral, which was held at the Methodist church on Sunday afternoon with Rev. E. B. Maxcy in charge. Mrs. I. L. Watson, Mrs. Elwin Smith, Mrs. Eva Murten and Mrs. L. R. Tompkins sang. Burial was in the Inman cemetery.

Mrs. Roe, her son Walter and two daughters, Opal and Hazel, were here for the funeral, as were many relatives and friends.

The Farmer Buys War Bonds

by O. B. Jesness
 Chief, Division of Agricultural Economics
 University of Minnesota

FARMER Brown does not have to ask himself whether he ought to buy War Bonds. He knows that every citizen with an income should lend part of it to the government to help win this war. The real question which Mr. Brown and all his fellow farmers must decide is how large his investment should be. The simplest and best answer to this is "buy all you can."

But what are some of the points which a farmer needs to weigh in deciding what amount is in his particular case? Farm income certainly is one. Most farmers are receiving considerably larger cash incomes because of the war. Some of the increase may be needed to pay pressing debt. Higher taxes will take some. But most of it ought to be salted away in War Bonds for future use.

Part of the current cash income represents wear and tear on machinery and equipment. War shortages prevent farmers from buying machinery or building freely. Less money can be spent for these purposes now, but more cash will be needed later on because of this. Each farmer ought to figure the amount which this involves. The best storage place for the money which prudent farmers will set aside for this use is War Bonds.

Farm homes will need new equipment as well. Electricity has recently been installed in many farm homes and more will get this service as soon as possible. Funds saved up now can be used later to buy things to add to the comforts of the home and to ease the drudgery of farm work.

War prices will not last forever. The future will bring years of low prices or bad crops as well as good years. Some of the present income will come in mighty handy in times of low return. Farmers also are saving for educating their children, for old age and for the proverbial rainy day. Each family should think about all of these needs and set aside money to meet them. There is no safer place for such savings than War Bonds.

Should debts be paid before Bonds are bought? Each farmer must answer for himself. Due and pressing debt should be paid. If necessary, long-term debt should be reduced to a point where it can be carried. After that, available income better go into Bonds. Your own conscience will tell you when you are using debt merely as an excuse for neglecting to do your share in buying Bonds.

What about buying land? Can you handle more land profitably? Is it worth the price asked? Can you pay for it out of earnings when prices drop? A speculative boom in land may get out of hand. Better buy Bonds than speculate in land.

What about the farmer who says "I prefer to keep my funds in cash?" Stop to think, brother, how smart is that? Do you believe it good business to have idle dollars lying around? If they are hid away somewhere, they may get lost, stolen or destroyed. Put them to work and make them produce a return for you. War Bonds are the safest investment available. They are backed by the same government as the dollar. One is as safe as the other. While farmers buy Bonds intending to hold them, the E, F and G bonds ordinarily bought by individual investors can be redeemed for cash if need arises. Unlike the liberty bonds of the last war, these cannot be sold on the open market and, hence, will never sell for fewer dollars than they cost.

Farmers have done a good job in buying War Bonds. They can make an even better showing if each one will buy all he can. Remember, you help yourself as well as your country.
