DO THEY REALLY?

"Ingratitude, Thou Marble-Hearted Fiend!"

Trampling feet, the sound of drums, a voice of command—soldiers are marching by—a nation pays a debt to its dead, and does honor to their memory. Throughout the land, monuments serve to recall the valor of those distinguished heroes, the men "who never came back". But the monuments alone are mute things; they cannot voice sufficiently a nation's feelings! It takes something external to do that. So on Memorial Day, year after year, the young who follow after the old who remained behind, offer tribute to our war dead in parades. Armistice Day also we again publicly say "Thank you" and re-dedicate ourselves and our nation to the cause of world peace.

It is necessary to give outward expression of our appreciation to our soldier dead, and it is also reasonable that we honor God in a manifold manner. He has been our lifelong guide and protector. Our trust in Him certainly has not been in vain.

Instinct demands that our gratitude and honor to God should be expressed outwardly. It is not sufficient merely to think of God. We have bodies too, that are as much dependent on Him as our minds. The body must cooperate in giving honor to God; it must help in expressing gratitude for the gifts He has given; it must show sentiments of sorrow when we have betrayed Him by sin.

In the Catholic Church the Sacrifice of the Mass is one means whereby God is publicly, and so to speak, officially honored. The priest offers this Sacrifice in the name of the people as their representative. Through the petitions he presents in their name, the people adore God, thank Him for favors received, ask Him for pardon for past offenses and for new blessings. Through the Mass they express publicly the honor we owe to God, but St. Paul says: "By Him (Christ) we have access . . . to the Father. Now therefore you are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints and companions of God . . . in whom you are also built together into a habitation of God in the Spirit" (Eph. 2, 18-22).

In the Mass we believe that we continue the sacrifice of Christ Himself, the most acceptable sacrifice of the redemption in which we, as members of Christ, are permitted to join ourselves to Him.

If you desire further information on the Sacrifice of the Mass, or have any question to ask about the Catholic Church, please write to: Catholic Information Society, 7800 Kenrick Road, St. Louis, Mo.

ANTHRAX MENACE TO HEALTH OF LIVESTOCK

Reports during the past year seem to indicate that the deadly disease, anthrax, is spreading anew, appearing in fresh territories and in some cases causing severe losses.

Livestock owners should familiarize themselves with the characteristics of this disease, for it not only affects all farm animals, but human beings as well. Cattle are its most frequent victims. If a steer is found dead in the pasture some morning, as though struck by lightning, anthrax may be cause. In its acute form, anthrax can kill an animal in the twinkling of an eye, without any previous evidence of illness. In other cases, it causes staggering, spasms, and stupor before death. If a farm animal dies and anthrax is suspected, the carcass should not be opened, but a veterinarian should be called at once to determine the cause of death, and to protect the rest of the herd if this deadly disease proves to be present.

Anthrax is caused by a germ which inhabits the soil, sometimes remaining in the ground for years, in the spore stage. It is most frequently picked up by cattle grazing on overflow pastures, or on dry land after a drought. Animals which have thus picked up the germ can readily pass it on to other animals throughout the farm. Human beings can contract the disease in handling animals which have died of it. This is why carcass disposal in anthrax cases is generally a subject of official sanitary regulations.

In areas where anthrax is a threat, it is fortunately possible to immunize animals against this disease in advance of an outbreak. There are several types of effective vaccines which confer sound immunity, if given before the disease attacks.

ARMY DIETICIANS GO OVERSEAS—As the war progresses more and more women dieticians are required to minister to the nutritional needs of the sick and wounded, the War Department has announced. Qualified women are appointed in the Medical Department, Army Service Forces, in the relative rank of second lieutenant. They are assigned to duty in evacuation hospitals, hospital ships and wherever their services are needed to plan the diets of patients, supervise the preparation of food, assist in ordering supplies and in maintaining sanitary conditions.

Applicants must be under 45 years of age and pass a physical examination. Educational requirements include a degree from an approved college with a major in foods and nutrition or institutional management. The applicant must also complete a dietician's training course approved by the Surgeon General. Under certain conditions two years of hospital experience may be substituted.

Above, soldiers are instructed in the proper course of diet. Below, a dietician at an Army base advises a soldier's wife as to a baby's diet.

in action

More and more our armies are landing our fighting troops by parachute, disrupting enemy lines, enemy communications, but paying a heavy price in casualties.

Silken fineries and their substitutes are fast passing from the market to provide safe landings for our distant fighting men. We can still buy silk and nylon for them with War Bonds and Stamps.
