EDUCATIONAL NOTES
 The next regular Teachers' Examinations will be given in O'Neill on Saturday, July 7. There will not be another one until November.

The closing date for Free High School Tuition applications is July 1. However if they are received here during the following week they can be included in the list made by the County Superintendent to be Board of Supervisors. Since the tuition was raised this year it is more important than ever to see that such applications are on file.

A school for teachers will be held in O'Neill from August 6 to 22nd inclusive. I have made arrangements with the Wayne State College to send instructors here for that purpose. Three hours of college credit may be earned at $3.50 per hour. I believe this will be a definite help to the teachers of Holt county in trying to qualify for teaching positions. The advantage of being at home, within driving distance or with bus connections will make it possible for a good many to attend who otherwise could not.

The course will be supervised by Dr. Ray Bryan, a rural school specialist and by Miss Mamie Corkindale, Supervisor of Rural Education at Wayne State Teachers College. It will be on the order of a work shop dealing with the improvement of instruction in elementary school subjects. I believe any elementary teacher will find the course profitable and interesting. As plans for this Course are advanced I shall outline them to you later in the Holt County Educational Notes.

The majority of annual reports from school districts were sent in on time. However there are some which need "retouching" and there are a few still delinquent. Since one column out of balance delays the whole report from this county to the state department, I urge all busy directors to attend to their reports just as soon as possible.
 ELJA McCULLOUGH, County Superintendent.
