EXPERIMENT IN TRAINING

Marching rigidly at attention, this squad of boyish-looking soldiers is a part of the more than 660 trainees receiving special instruction at Fort Knox, Ky., as an experimental step toward setting up a universal military training program. The group was assembled to test provisions of bills before congress calling for one year of training of all high school graduates or youths of 18. Experiment is proving a success, officials say.

UNITED NATIONS' 'HOME-TOWN'

Architects representing nine nations gathered in Radio City, New York, to take a look at a model of the general architectural scheme for the United Nations' permanent headquarters. To be constructed on an 18-acre site along the East river in Manhattan, the project includes a 40-story skyscraper (left) to house the secretariat, and another 30-story structure for general purposes.
