Selling Beer to Minors Is a Serious Offense

Nebraska Laws forbid sale of alcoholic beverages to minors. Violation of this law subjects the tavern keeper to revocation or suspension of his license. No retailer can afford that risk.

To protect tavern keepers against misrepresentations of age, this Committee has provided retailers with "Sworn Statements" which doubtful cases must sign before making a purchase. Minors who swear they are 21 years of age or over are subject to a $50 fine for misrepresentation.

This is only one important service to the public provided by this Committee. The purpose of the program as a whole is to keep the handling of beer on such a high plane that it has the full approval of the public.

PRAIRIELAND
... TALK

By
ROMAINE SAUNDERS

LINCOLN—The capitol city has within its cultural confines most of the time a committee with a "problem." One of the latest to be "temporarily" disposed of is that of the location for the sculptured figure of the late Mr. Bryan, once known as the "Boy Orator of the Platte."

These cold figures in stone or bronze are of little interest to most people. Certainly the dead whose memory they are supposed to perpetuate are wholly indifferent. "The living know that they shall die but the dead know not anything."

Bryan, three times a candidate for the presidency, was a gifted orator. So was John M. Thurston. William V. Allen, and a number of other Nebraskans. But orators did not develop prairieland into a great state. The sodhouse pioneer started that. Maybe if Nebraska democrats are desirous of making a gesture, there was Art Mullen, never an orator but a great democrat. Or perhaps a figure with a big hat to represent Jim Dahlman mounted on a horse would be equally appropriate.

Yankeeland affords a variety of nature scene. Look over the wooded slopes of New England hills, into the cool depths of the rushing Niagara, the gloomy Atlantic rolling landward with sullen roar, the historic Delaware and Potomac, Great Lakes and inland waterways, canyons of the Colorado Rockies and two miles up over the continental divide, the endless sweep of lonely mesa beyond the mountains, the towering granite piles of the Sierras, the foam-washed rock guarding the Golden Gate, desert and timber, and fruitful valley, and then come back and stand alone on a calm evening out on prairieland and there behold nature's masterpiece drawn with a brush of gold above the prairie rim. 'Tis the hour of a Nebraska sunset.

The justice department threatens prosecution with the promise of jail sentences if they can hook the business interests of the country on conspiracy charges to increase prices, and at the same time studiously avoid laying a legal hand on the two greatest of all trusts, the AFL and the CIO. And while they are in the trust-busting business the attorney general's setup might find something interesting in connection with the big hospitals and the MD's.

Educators of the state, preachers from various states, took over the capital city recently and regaled themselves and the few plebians who felt equal to the heat with plentiful platitudes for this "new age" while artisan and harassed business executive, tractor farmer and office clerk, builder and bricklayer plugged along at their jobs about as they have in every age. Maybe what is needed is more doing and less dodging.

The resignation of a government official heading some New Deal setup is reported frequently, the reassuring explanation being heavy cut in funds by congress. Cutting off the flow of cash is the one sure way of getting rid of the supernumeraries.

One of the great newspapers of Seattle has suspended publication because of the high cost of production. Fifteen dollars a day each for the printers to set the type, stereotypers, pressmen and editorial force, all on the payroll combined with rising paper costs made the shutdown imperative. The cost of keeping business going is becoming serious. I asked a food dealer why a bill of goods purchased seems always to run a few pennies over even money. He said those pennies were his profit and if he did not get them he would have to close the store.
