

NO SECOND-STORY MEN THEY . . . This modern age of steel-thewed skyscrapers with thousands of windows is the cause of situations like the one recorded here. It was touted as the largest mass window-washing job to be held, and it took place on the impressive face of the world's largest commercial building, the Merchandise Mart in Chicago, Ill. The event, which made even hardened city dwellers look up for a few moments, took place during a clean up campaign in Chicago. Between 300 and 400 window washers, provided by their association from all parts of the city, took part in the demonstration.
