A 10-Year Record of Self-Regulation

The brewing industry's Self-Regulation program in Nebraska is now completing a decade of operation. The 10-year record has proved beyond all question that this Self-Regulation, good-conduct program is a powerful and PERMANENT force for good — that its accomplishments are very worthwhile.

Originated by the brewing industry 10 years ago to insure sale of its product in keeping with the public interest, this program has demonstrated through depression and prosperity . . . through war and peace . . . that it DOES serve the public interest.

It has served by education, by tavern inspections, by enlisting the support of citizens, and by improving the quality of retailers. For instance, today less than 1% of license applications are denied for past improper conduct.

It has served without the expenditure of public funds, thus contributing to reduction in taxes.

This program has so proved its worth that it has been adopted by the industry in many other states, testifying to its value as an asset to the industry and to the communities in which it operates.
