4-H Activity Important Community Factor; Helps Reduce Delinquency

(Editor's note: Four-H club activity in Holt county is constantly gaining interest among youths and parents alike. We solicited from County Agent A. Neil Dawes a discussion of 4-H activity as it affects community life. His report follows.)

By County Agent A. Neil Dawes

The 4-H clubbers from all parts of Holt county have been doing a fine job in carrying on their projects in home economics, livestock, agriculture and recreation. Your Holt county extension agents have made visits to many outstanding clubs during the past year.

We have been impressed particularly with the manner the 4-H clubbers throughout the county have been of community service by helping tie the people together into an active working group. We think this means security to a community.

Four-H clubs have been providing excellent entertainment and instruction, which helps dad, mother and the children play together. The boys and girls are learning leadership in business and recreation.

They do not depend on a lot of money to have a good time, but they have been making their own good times. This is well illustrated by such activities as: Picnics, ball games, 4-H club bands, tours, community programs showing and developing local talent, jamborees for several communities, and handicraft. The clubs are doing or sponsoring these activities in their respective communities.

Recently several clubs around Stuart have become interested in providing recreation for the town and country youth on Saturday nights by holding a jamboree. The jamborees consist of active games, musical games and folk dances. Each of the following clubs has staged a Saturday night recreational affair: The Jolly Jills of Stuart; the Ever Onward, of Stuart; the Cleveland club, of Stuart, and the Merry Madomeselles, of Stuart. This is a direct result of the recreation training that has been given them by the Holt county extension service, the agents and rural youth members.

The Up And At It club, of O'Neill, keeps up community interest by staging a ball game each week in Summer and having community "get-togethers" in the winter, when games are played, and occasionally, an old-fashioned square dance. The Riverside club of O'Neill also has ball games as well as many other activities, such as 3-act plays, musical programs and all types of recreation including community quizzes, active relays, musical games and squares. This community looks forward to these good times.

The Holt Creek club of Atkinson is trying something new besides picnics and games. The members are starting to do handicraft work in leather and husterlace. The Bluebird club, of Atkinson, has a 4-H band, which was started in their country school. All the members are very young. They play for various occasions in the county and at the community good times. The Happy Hollow club, of Ewing, sponsors community picnics, does lots of singing and puts on an achievement day at Ewing each year.

This is only a part of the 4-H activities, but it gives an opportunity for you to see that it has been a means of getting the parents and children to playing together as well as building and encouraging leadership among our youth.

Every community should have a 4-H club to "get behind" and "push along" by taking part in the activities of the group. Our youth is the only crop of real lasting value. It is through the efforts of the club leader that this crop may be cultivated and thus be allowed to mature into normal mature persons who will assume their responsibility in society as a worthy American citizen.

The national 4-H club foundation in Chicago, Ill., has realized the importance of community life and of the part that 4-H clubs have been playing in building the community. This year it will be giving to counties and states, taking part in the rural arts and recreation activities, awards to show the results of the clubs efforts. The purpose of this awards program is to help club members achieve the following activities:

1. To assist 4-H members in developing stimulating cultural and recreational opportunities in their homes and communities.
2. To help members develop a higher appreciation of the cultural value of rural arts in their homes and communities.
3. To make 4-H programs more attractive and self-satisfying.
4. To learn to lead recreational activities as well as to follow.
5. To make friends by participating as a member of a recreational group.

Each 4-H club selected by the 4-H club committee will receive a blue ribbon if deemed worthy of a blue ribbon. The 10 high counties in the state will receive $25 to be used to further community recreation and rural arts. Eight members in the U. S. will get to go to Chicago to the national club congress to assist with the recreation.

When boys and girls are busy leading their communities in well selected recreation and arts it is going a long way towards reducing the tendency for "community breakdown." This is when juvenile delinquency begins.

Families who work, play and pray together stay together. This also is true of a community. The agricultural extension service usually stands ready to help develop that leadership through their 4-H clubs, Rural Youth groups, and other groups. The county agents are glad to work with church groups, civic groups, rural community clubs, or other groups interested in developing and training leadership.
