

Gen. Omar Bradley: 'Quiet, Gracious, Good Natured, Basically a Plain Person'

By DREW PEARSON

Doubt About Dulles

It isn't being advertised, but Governor Dewey has received some firm but friendly advice from high-up Republicans to think twice before he appoints John Foster Dulles as his secretary of state.

The opposition to Dulles is partly on the ground that he is one of Wall Street's most prominent lawyers, partly because of the disastrous role Dulles played in selling the American public on the now defaulted German bonds prior to 1938 when leading American economists were warning that they would be worthless paper.

One high-up Republican who recently cautioned Dewey about Dulles was Sen. Styles Bridges (Rep., N. H.), chairman of the powerful senate appropriations committee. Bridges raised a new objection, namely Dulles' recommendation of Alger Hiss, alleged Communist, to be the chairman of the Carnegie Peace Foundation.

The directors of the foundation, Bridges recalled, were lukewarm about Hiss but were pressured into the appointment by Dulles.

"Yes, he did make a mistake on that one," admitted Dewey. "And he's made too many mistakes regarding the Nazis. We just can't afford to have a man as secretary of state who makes mistakes. The problem of peace is too delicate."

Bridges also reminded Dewey that Dulles might have difficulty in being confirmed by the senate.

"We hope to give you a real majority in the senate in November," the New Hampshire senator explained. "But we may be darned lucky to keep what we've got. If so, and if only two or three Republicans oppose Dulles, then the Democrats will jump in en masse to fight his confirmation. They'll love it."

Dewey countered that Foreign Minister Molotov liked Dulles, and that ironing out our Russian problems was all important.

"He's the only man in America who can get along with Molotov," Dewey told Bridges.

"And, I suppose," quipped Bridges, "that Molotov is a good Republican and wants us to win in November."

In Praise of Bradley

If war should come to beleaguered Berlin, the men at the top of the U. S. army today are among the most competent, human, and civilian-minded that this newsman has seen around the war department in many a year.

This appraisal, by the way, comes from a longtime and vigorous critic of the brass hats.

Responsible for this new deal around the Pentagon building are General Eisenhower and his successor, modest Omar Bradley.

It is important for the American public to know that when the dare-devil boys of the air forces and the drop-the-bomb-now men of the navy gather at joint chiefs of staff meetings, there is always present one calm conscience who never forgets the 300,000 GIs buried under white crosses from Guadalcanal to Sicily.

Take off his uniform and Omar Bradley looks like a college professor. He is quiet, gracious, generous, good natured and basically a very plain person. Everybody who ever worked with Bradley remarks on his simplicity. His mess sergeant in France had orders never to use Bradley's name to wrangle food for headquarters. Once during the historic landing at Normandy, Bradley, then a three-star general, took off his fleecy-lined jacket and handed it to a shivering corporal.

"Here, son," he said. "It will be easier for me to get another than it will be for you."

Spunky Mr. Truman

Spunky Harry Truman isn't being discouraged by the Roper poll which concedes him no chance to win. Talking to the District of Columbia Truman-Barkley committee the other day, he declared:

"We won't lose this campaign for lack of hard work. I intend to make more public appearances and wage the most strenuous campaign any president has ever attempted. I'm not only going to make radio appeals to the man in the street—I'm going to rub shoulders with him."

His chief worry, the President confided, was the possibility of a light vote.

"We'll need a heavy vote and I'm going out to get it if I have to punch doorbells," the President said. "If every Democratic precinct committeeman throughout the country operates on that theory, we'll be all right."

That even goes for the District of Columbia, Truman told his D. C. callers, led by Al Wheeler, a Washington attorney.

"Citizens of the District can't vote, but there's a big potential absentee vote here that could be mighty important," explained the President.
