

Be Loyal, Mary Devine Urges Grid Fans, Though Team Is No Worry to Notre Dame

By MARY DEVINE BRENNAN

Hiah! There's nothing quite like a football game, is there?—bands, crowds, spectacular touchdowns, and letter-sweaters everywhere. A football game can be a grand show of school spirit.

It can be, but often it isn't. You've seen the games where only a few people show up.

They do very little cheering and usually leave if their team gets a touchdown or two behind in the score. Don't let that happen at your games. Stay with your team even if the score hits 48 - 0 in someone else's favor. It's not easy but keep cheering. The boys on the team do the actual playing, but you sideline-sitters are often responsible for whether they win or lose.

Remember that outsiders judge your school by what they see of its student gatherings. Unless you want to give a bad impression of your school watch your personal game behavior.

If, sometime, you are called on to do some of the work at a pep rally dig in cheerfully and with enthusiasm. Go to all the home games and as many of the others as you can. Never, never boo a player, a team, or an official. Don't leave a game before it's over, especially if your team is behind on the scoreboard.

Be loyal. Your team may not be a source of worry for Notre Dame, but it is good. Let the fellas know you think so.

If it does happen that your team is the team of the year, be careful, too. Anything you do or say may not be held against you, but it will be held against your school, so watch it.

Being a good winner is no easier than being a good loser. It isn't only the players who sometimes suffer from "football heads." Remember that football season is short and basketball time may find your school at the bottom of the league. Be proud of your team, yes, but don't make the losers hate you.

Be wise in your sideline tactics, and whether your team is hot or slightly on the frigid side, you'll have a fighting team and the friendship and admiration of all the rival schools.

All sideline-sitters, it appears, are not restricted to the football field. There seems to be quite a crowd of them at the teenage dances. You'll have more fun if you dance, boys, honestly.

If you don't dance because you can't dance get one of the girls to teach you how. Girls love to do that sort of thing. Just ask and you'll see.

The hostesses were very much pleased with the "thank-you's" after the last dance. Keep it up, kids. They've done a lot for you and it's all the pay they ask.

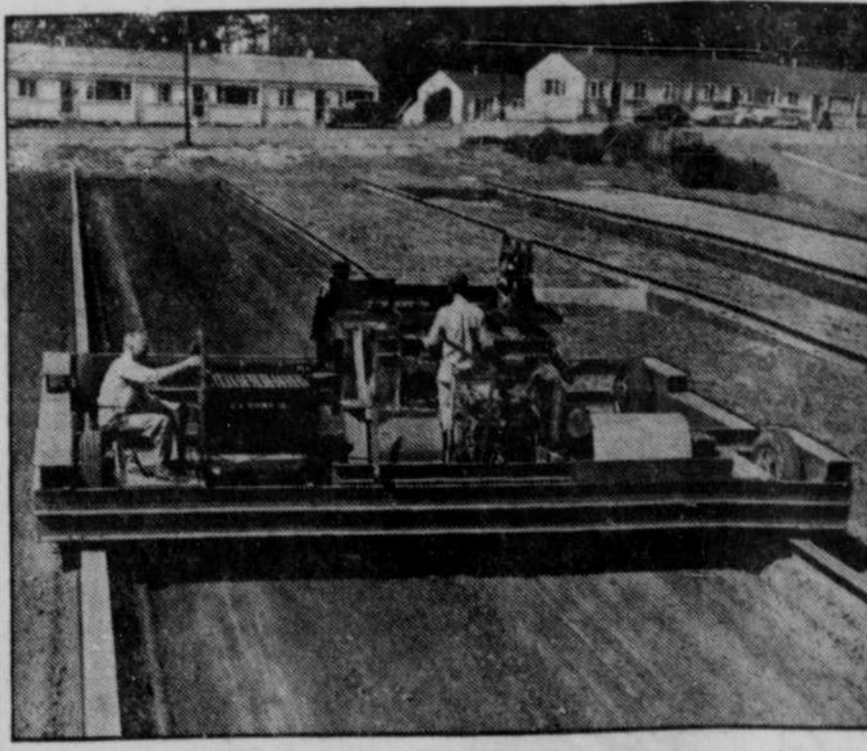

There will be a dance at the Legion club tomorrow night and another on November 5. Have fun! See ya' next week—
