Stroller Prepares to Start Home

By A. STOLLER

PHOENIX, ARIZ., May 9—As these lines are being written, the writer is in the full swing of packing to return home. He has been in Phoenix since about the middle of last September and, while Nebraska had a long and awful Winter, he figures it must be about over by this time. As a matter of fact, the latest weather reports he has read from the Midwest indicate that Winter is not only over, but that some new hot weather records have already been established this season.

Well, that's Nebraska and the Midwest for you. No monotony there! Sometimes a certain kind of weather, doesn't last long enough for you to get used to it. Constant change all the year round.

We certainly have also seen all kinds of weather in this country since I arrived on a hot, sultry day last September. When I left Nebraska, Indian Summer had just started and the weather was beautiful all along the route; but there was a terribly hot spell after I got off the train here.

As I recall it, a new heat record was established for that time of year.

After a few weeks of that, the weather suddenly turned cold and developed into a record-breaking Winter. It was the longest, coldest, wettest season in the 50 odd years' history of the weather bureau and, naturally, the tourists didn't like it. The rainfall, however, was a great blessing to the Phoenix area, which had suffered from drought for several years. The reservoirs had run alarmingly low.

We had some beautiful weather in February, March was windy and another unusual thing happened in April in the smashing of the all-time seasonal heat records. One day the official maximum was 104. This month the temperature was on the whole cool and delightful.

One of the big events in Phoenix the past few months from a community standpoint was the annual rodeo and another was the Masque of the Yellow Moon, presented by the two high schools. That was a gorgeous outdoor spectacle. The writer has become acquainted with many more fine people during his several months' visit this year. He intends to leave the latter part of this week and will arrive in Nebraska the first part of next week. He will, as always, be glad to be at home again. Is thinking of that delicious sweetcorn on the cob. Yum! Yum!

He will travel over the Santa Fe from Phoenix to Kansas City, Mo., and will probably have something worthwhile to write about. (Next week: Enroute to Nebraska.)

Right this way for the big parade of values—grocery and household specials you can't afford to miss.
