A. Stroller Writes About Trip Home

By A. STROLLER
Well, here I am back in good, old Nebraska after several months' residence in the Southwest. Be assured that my home state, especially at this beautiful season of the year, looks unusually good after such a long absence.

As Frontier readers may recall, the writer left Nebraska last September and traveled by train to Phoenix, Ariz., to spend the Winter. He is compelled to do that on account of his health. After spending many years in the rigorous climate of the Midwest, he became afflicted with asthma and can no longer live here during the cold weather. In the mild climate of Southern Arizona, he gets complete relief. So do a great many other people who are afflicted with asthma, sinus trouble and kindred diseases. Consequently, people thus afflicted flock to Arizona from all parts of the country to spend the Winter.

When I last wrote from Phoenix, I was in the midst of packing, preparatory to leaving on my long trip to Nebraska.

It was a hectic week and I put in long hours at the job. There are so many things to think about at such a time one is always liable to forget something. The best way to do, the writer has found, is to make out a complete list and follow it carefully, checking off item by item. As a matter of fact, he doesn't think he forgot anything on his recent trip from his razor to his umbrella.

Then, in addition to packing, there were many other things to do. Had to buy a ticket, get some clothes pressed, finish up some work at the YMCA cafeteria, attend a conference of the "Y" staff, say goodbye to a number of friends, etc., etc. It was a busy and hectic week.

The last day I spent in Phoenix was a very pleasant one for, after locking my trunks and accompanying them to the depot to be checked, I relaxed to some extent and went out to my daughter's house for dinner. She called for me at 2:30 in the afternoon, we drove to her home a couple of miles away and had dinner and a good visit.

Then, she packed me a delicious lunch and we drove to the depot in ample time to board the 5 o'clock Santa Fe train for the North.

When I left Phoenix, the weather was quite hot, but, when the train pulled into Ash Fork in the Northern part of Arizona late that night, it was very cold. It has been cold in Nebraska since I arrived home; but not nearly as cold as it was in Northern Arizona. I needed the heavy overcoat I carried with me.

In future articles, the writer will describe his trip home and try to give the reader some impressions of the scenery along the way.

Scout Committee Discusses Future Plans for Troop

The committeemen of Boy Scout troop 210 met Monday evening and discussed plans for the Summer camp in Johnstown and a community project that will interest all the boys in the troop, according to M. E. Jacobson, troop committeeman.

The Boy Scouts discussed Wednesday evening their plans for a community project.

A. A. McMasters, scoutmaster, announced Wednesday that formal installation ceremonies of the troop will be held at 8 p. m. on June 15 with district commissioners or other Scout officials present to represent the Covered Wagon Council.

Attend Funeral—Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kurtz and family Friday attended the funeral of Mrs. Kurtz's grandfather, E. E. Brown, of Riverton, Ia.
