PRAIRIELAND TALK
moves in cross-currents into the glow of green lights another direction. And so day by day city streets carry the streams or shifting humanity.

Several women of a more or less harassed religious group have the courage of martyrs and mingle with the crowds on O street bearing on their persons printed signs, "It is later than you think." And these signs invite you to a service to hear the reverberations of a wrecked and ruined world as presented by one of their able speakers. Acceptance of the doctrine that the end is at hand puts all on their toes who would escape the wrath of the ages, and they are doing something about it while the staid old denominations rattle the dry bones of formalism and moss-grown traditions.

A friend of this department, one of the war scarred veterans, wrote me awhile ago to express disapproval of views expressed in Prairieland Talk concerning giving little children toy guns for play things. He thinks they play a part in preparing citizens for defense of the country. If that is the object, give the tots A-bombs to play with. Other weapons of destruction will probably be obsolete when the bugles call to the next rally round the flag. But I am grateful for the friend's comment. The grand thing about Yankeeland is we are free to express our views whether we agree or disagree with our friends.

"Many shall run to and fro and knowledge shall be increased." How was it known in BC 534 that the streets and highways in AD 1949 would be cluttered with traffic and this generation would outshine all others in knowledge? It could only be known by a Being who knows the end from the beginning.

A fur over the shoulder as a former July style for ladies has been replaced by nothing.
