Milners Witness Big Forest Fire

ATKINSON—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Milner recently were staying in a cabin at Rapid City, S. D., when a forest fire in that section of the Black Hills district was reported.

The Milners went to get a first-hand view of the blaze. Mrs. Milner said it was both "breath-taking" and "terrifying." First you would see a blaze shoot skyward along the line of fire. Then some distance away, tops of other trees would ignite. Almost instantly the intervening space would break into a blaze.

They were alerted for highway clearance and were back in their cabin only about two hours when traffic was closed in that part of the Hills until the fire could be brought under control. The blaze could be seen at Sundance, Wyo., a distance of about 70 miles, where fire fighters were alerted.

The "old timers" explained that a "top fire" is the most difficult to control as it jumps so rapidly, and the wind gets a better sweep at it. This particular fire started in a wheat field adjoining the forest and burned over an area of 15- to 18,000 acres. Mr. and Mrs. Milner returned Friday, August 26, and they said, while the Hills are a very beautiful section of our country and they had many lasting memories of their grandeur, the excitement of the fire would probably stand out the most vividly. However, the constant watchfulness and expert efficiency of the forest rangers make a fire of this sort an exception. Very rarely, they say, does a blaze cover more than an acre or two. The rangers say that lightning and cigarette stubs form the greatest hazards.
