The snow storm February 11 to 13 made it difficult for teachers who had gone home for the weekend to reach their boarding places in the district in which they taught. Miss Ruth Lindberg, who lives north of O'Neill, and teaches the Hendricks school, 15 miles north of Atkinson, was one of the many who had a hard time getting back.

Her father, Fred Lindberg, has a power wagon (an army truck) and he brought her to the Hendricks home. It was storming so hard that it was difficult to find the road. Sometimes they missed it entirely. On the return trip he got within 4 or 5 miles of home and "burned out" something on the army truck and had to leave it and find other means to get home. It was the first snow storm of the winter that amounted to much.

Albert Johanson was a visitor at the Connie Fricke, jr., home Thursday afternoon, February 9.

Bernard Blackmore and Leonard Chaffin helped Mark Hendricks cut down wood for sawing Friday, February 10. The women came, too, and visited with Mrs. Hendricks.

IS ON THE AIR

"K A A" are the call letters of the new two-way radio communication system being installed by Consumers Public Power District to help make your electric service as efficient and dependable as humanly possible.

Truly a safeguard to service, this efficient system comprises the most modern equipment available and will enable your electric crews to serve you faster and better.

Even during emergencies, when other forms of communication are inoperative, your electric crews will be able to communicate via radio, both ways between stations, between stations and crews on the job and from one crew to another, thus saving time and travel and eliminating as much as possible the inconvenience of interruption to your electric service.

The map below shows locations of the twenty-six radio transmitter stations now being installed to form a complete network throughout the Eastern System of Consumers Public Power District. As a part of this efficient communication system, 180 mobile communication units are being installed in trucks and other service equipment located in virtually every community where Consumers District maintains service personnel.

SPENCER, O'NEILL, NELOCH, NORFOLK, OAKLAND, VALENTINE, AINSWORTH, ALBION, COLU, MBUS, SCRIBNER, PLATTSMOUTH, LOUP CITY, GRAND ISLAND, YORK, SEWARD, LINCOLN, BEATRICE, HUMBOLDT, KEARNEY, GLAY CENTER, GENEVA, SUPERIOR, ORLEANS

The new radio communication system is only one of the major improvements being made by Consumers Public Power District to bring you the most efficient electric service possible. Another phase is the construction of new high voltage feeders and other power supply and distribution facilities being constructed throughout the state.
