Borneo Mission Worker Coming

Harold R. Carlbom, missionary to Borneo, will be guest speaker at O'Neill Assembly of God Church, according to an announcement made by Rev. Wayne Hall, pastor. Mr. Carlbom will be telling of his experiences in Borneo and in Java, where he labored under difficult conditions, Reverend Hall said.
 Mr. Carlbom is under appointment of the foreign missions department of the Assemblies of God, headquarters in Springfield, Mo. He returned from the field in November.
 When Mr. Carlbom left the United States in May, 1946, together with his wife and family, he intended to engage in missionary work in Sumatra. He spent several months in Australia awaiting passage, but because of the political conditions throughout all of the United States of Indonesia and Netherlands East Indies they were never permitted to enter Sumatra. He finally went to Java and from there on to Borneo.

Much of the time that the Carlboms were in Borneo they had to confine their activities to Bandjermasin, where they were stationed. Even in Bannjermasin there were zones which could not be entered under penalty of death.

Through use of a motor boat, however, during lulls in the revolution, Mr. Carlbom was able to make trips far to the inland regions of Borneo where the gospel has never been carried. Many dangers were encountered on these trips.

Mr. Carlbom and his wife developed two Sunday-schools in Borneo. The larger was attended by between 150 and 200 children. The children were from Mohammedan and Confucian families. In the inland regions, Mr. Carlbom found raw heathenism.
 Reverend Hall extends a cordial invitation to the public.
