Omahan Pulls Sleeper Play in Filing For Attorney - General's Position

LINCOLN — Whether an Omaha Democrat named Harold P. Caldwell had pulled off the year's biggest political surprise was being debated at the capital this week.

Caldwell walked into the secretary of state's office a few minutes before the 5 p. m. filing Thursday, June 29, and submitted his application for the regular nomination at attorney - general, and also for the short term.

He maintained that the law allows Attorney-General C. S. Beck, who succeeded James H. Anderson, to hold the office only "until the next election."

Since Caldwell was the only one to file for the short term, he reasoned he should automatically get the office from the time the election is certified (sometime in November) until January, when officials elected in the general balloting take office.

Petitions may be circulated for a candidate up until 60 days before the election, so it's conceivable there may be others in the short term race.

Beck pook-pooed the scheme, but 2 other statehouse attorneys said privately they believed Caldwell "had something." The ironical twist is that the secretary of state's office will seek an opinion from Beck, as attorney-general.

These were other last-minute filing developments:

Andrew Swanson, of Polk, withdrew as a Republican candidate for governor and sought to file for the Democrat nomination for lieutenant governor. He was miffed at what he called the "awful way" he was brushed off at the GOP preliminary convention in Omaha. Told he could not legally switch parties without 60 days notice, he then filed as a Republican candidate for lieutenant governor.

Last to file was Lou Maupin, of Lincoln, who beat the clock by 2 minutes in filing for the Democratic nomination for railway commissioner.

Following is a complete list of filings:
