Wool Casuals Take on Festive Air

Imaginative Color Combinations, Slim Silhouettes Are Highlights

Light and dark gray are combined to make this two-tone casual in Juillard sheer wool.

THE wool casual, often the backbone of a wardrobe, is not necessarily simple this fall. It may have a catchy yoke treatment, a peplum, capelet, side-drape or surplice front. The silhouette is always slim and imagination is often evidenced in the combination of two colors, or in two shades of one color.

A hug-me-tight casual in wool boucle, designed by Margaret Newman, comes in purple with a yoke of winter white. Interesting detail is seen in the large hip pockets which almost surround the slim-in-front and gored-in-back skirt. The elbow length sleeves end in cavalier cuffs.

Another casual by this same designer is available in Juillard sheer wool. Subtle tones of light and dark gray are combined to make a slim dress with a surplice front caught by antiqued gold buttons. Sleeves are cut slightly dolman but are slim and tight at the wrists.

A yoke of winter white emphasizes the detail of this hug-me-tight casual in wool boucle.
