

Emmet Bank Closes its Doors

"There were good times, crashes, depressions, bank holidays, nearbreaks and gratifying moments during those years," Mr. Dailey recalls.

The Emmet bank weathered them all in the era when folks lost count of the bank failures, because they were so numerous, the Emmet State continued business as usual.

"The morning I received a telegraphed order to suspend operations for the bank holiday, I was stunned. I thought it was a bad dream, because I knew we were 100 percent liquid. I couldn't understand it. A few days later we were told to reopen with no restrictions," Mr. Dailey remembers, "and that was a most gratifying moment. Of the banks that were allowed to reopen, only a few reopened without restrictions."

"There were times when the Emmet State's resources were less than 100-thousand-dollars. There were times when we'd go down to the bank in the morning and didn't know what the combined effect of demands of the guarantee fund and depositors might cause," he recalls, "but we were always in a position to pay."

"During my years in the banking business my first concern always was the depositor and having his money available when and if he wanted it. We could always pay 100 cents on the dollar," he proudly remembers.

The bank was burlarized on 3 different occasions, but never was it the scene of a stickup.

Hugh J. Birmingham and Homer Mullen have been the active managing officers since Mr. Dailey's withdrawal.

Nebraska at one time had 1,100 state-chartered banks. In the 1930's this number dwindled to less than 200 and Emmet continued to be one of the smallest communities in the state with a healthy bank.

Disappearance of banks in the small communities, like lumber yards, clothing stores and newspapers, has been an established trend during the past 25 or 30 years. The general rule is they are not profitable.

Loans at the Emmet bank have soared up to 200-thousand-dollars, but of late have been in the neighborhood of 30-thousand-dollars.

The investment recently has been about 50-thousand-dollars.

The birth, life and death of the Emmet State bank now belongs to those who will write the history of Holt county—and to the memories of Mr. Dailey, the Birmingham and Gallagher families and to hundreds of others for whom it was a banking "home."

And the familiar pink check blanks have become scratch paper.

Eagles Handily Sink Creighton

The O'Neill high Eagles had easy sailing Friday night against the Creighton Maroons, 26-0.

Coach Mary Miller's kids chalked up 3 first quarter touchdowns, his second stringers added a TD in the second quarter. Creighton never penetrated inside the O'Neill 40—and that fairly well sums up the ball game.

On the first scrimmage play of the evening, Halfback Don Calkins sprinted 70 yards to tally. Fullback Ed Tomlinson bucked from the 14 for the second O'Neill TD and Halfback Don Godel romped 30 yards for the third. Godel booted 1 extra point, ran another.

It was Calkins, operating behind a second string line, who registered O'Neill's final tally.

On Calkins' 70-yard gallop, he enjoyed excellent downfield blocks laid by Tomlinson and Godel.

The Eagles go to Ainsworth Friday night. In the comparative score department, Rock county high holds a triumph over Ainsworth, 14-13, and a 20-12 win over O'Neill.

Cards Lose 19-17 Thriller in Rain

The St. Mary's academy Cardinals almost tasted victory Friday night against St. Patrick's, of Fremont, on the foreign grid. But 3 penalties on 3 separate scoring plays cost vital points. St. Pat's won, 19-17.

The O'Neill kids had a TD called back on a holding penalty, another on a not clear pass, another because the backfield was in motion. On still another occasion, Don Becker juggled the ball in the end zone, having caught a pass. He dropped it and a Fremont pounced, giving SMA 2 points instead of 6.

Rain fell throughout the game. Don Donohoe, diminutive SMA back, romped for both touchdowns.

SMA's ground defenses were good; aerial defenses leaked too much.
