Top Angus Cow, Calf Bring Adams $1,100

The Leo T. Adams registered Aberdeen-Angus dispersion sale held Saturday, November 17, at the Atkinson Livestock Market, established an enviable record for an individual Angus breeder in this section.

Steel Creek Annie, the top cow with a 6-week-old calf, brought $1,100. Seventy-three head, mostly cows and calves, were offered. Cows averaged $558. The top-selling heifer calf, Blueblood Lady, went for $510, while the top bull calf brought $475.

Buyers came from over most of Nebraska and 3 South Dakota buyers were active in the bidding.

Sale was conducted by the Weller-Adams auction service with advertising handled by The Frontier, including 2-color catalogs.

One truck load of 27 registered Angus spilled enroute from the Adams ranch near Chambers to Atkinson, but none was hurt.

Mr. Adams dispersed his herd because he is devoting full-time to the auction service in partnership with E. C. Weller.

Baptists Hold Church Dinner

CHAMBERS—Members of the Memorial Baptist church here marked Thanksgiving day with a dinner in the church parlors. A majority of the church families and a few visitors attended.

An informal program followed the dinner with request numbers a feature. Solos, duets, trios and a male octet were included. Piano and saxophone solos were also given. Other features included readings, talks and a quiz by the Rev. E. M. McElheran.

That evening the young people of the church held a farewell gathering for Alston Rasmussen, who has enlisted in the marine corps and will leave Monday to take his physical examination. Two other Chambers men have also enlisted in the marine corps and will leave at the same time. They are Bruce Grimes and Robert Lieswald.

Estabrook's House Career Shortlived

Delegates to Congress - 4

It is a truism of the early years of Nebraska's territorial history that our delegates to congress had to spend much of their time defending their seats. Experience Estabrook, elected October 11, 1859, not only was called upon to defend his seat in the house of representatives, but lost it in the process.

Estabrook, a democrat, who prior to coming to Nebraska in 1855 as the first territorial attorney general, had lived in Wisconsin where he had been a member of the legislature and attorney general, defeated Samuel G. Daily, republican, 3,100 to 2,800, a majority of 30 votes.

On the strength of this, he was given a certificate of election and took his seat when the first session of the 36th Congress convened, December 5, 1859.

On February 16, 1860, however, Daily filed a memorial contesting the election, and after lengthy deliberation and the hearing of much evidence, the committee on elections of the house of representatives presented a resolution declaring that Daily rather than Estabrook was entitled to the seat as delegate from Nebraska. The house adopted the resolution on May 18, 1860, and Estabrook's brief congressional career came to an end.

The house's action was largely political, although it was contended that Estabrook had received a total of 429 illegal votes, or 129 more than his majority over Daily. There was no evidence that Estabrook or his friends had perpetrated any fraud. The committee of elections simply found that irregular and illegal votes had been cast.

Elections on the frontier were not so carefully regulated as they were in the more settled areas, and in many election contests the question revolved around which candidate had received the greater number of illegal votes.

(Daily in this instance was charged with 10 illegal votes.)

Despite this defeat, Estabrook did not lose his interest in Nebraska. He returned to Omaha to become one of that city's best known attorneys. He was a member of the constitutional convention of 1871 and played an important part in its deliberations. During his later years he became unsuccessfully involved in a celebrated lawsuit growing out of his refusal to pay taxes on real estate owned in Omaha on the grounds that the assessments were illegal because no official plat of the city had ever been prepared and recorded.

He died at his home in Omaha March 26, 1894.

SOAK LAWN. BUSHES NOW

Now is a good time to soak lawns, trees, shrubs and perennial plants to reduce winter injury, says Extension Horticulturist Wayne C. Whitney, of the University of Nebraska. He says plants continue to give off moisture in the winter even though they have no leaves. With plenty of water now, he adds, there will be more plant performance next spring.

Income Tax Short Course Stated

An income tax short course, designed especially for bankers, attorneys, accountants and others who help farmers with their income tax, is slated for December 6-8 at the University of Nebraska.

Extension Economist F. J. (Cye) Chase said that most Nebraska farmers may not realize how the 1951 changes and amendments to the federal income tax law will affect their 1952 income tax. Some of the important changes will be discussed at the short course include: Increase in tax, joint returns, changes in laws, gross income of dependents, family partnership, sale of the farm and farm residence and with a growing crop, net operating loss and carryover, and capital gains and losses.

Mr. Chase said some of the changes will raise the income tax and others will lower it. The 3-day school will be held on the college of agriculture campus. For details write to F. J. Chase, extension economist in farm management, college of agriculture, Lincoln.
