Senator Butler Formally Files

LINCOLN—The death last week of Sen. Kenneth S. Wherry has thrown the already muddled Nebraska political picture into a near riot.

At week's end, Governor Peterson was still declining to discuss a possible appointee. The capitol corridors overflowed with rumors of deals within deals within deals.

Out of the whole maze, only one thing appeared even close to certain—and there were some skeptics even there—that Peterson himself is not likely to resign so Lt.-Gov. Charles Warner could become governor and appoint Peterson to the Wherry vacancy.

The governor told reporters there was no change from the statement he made when declining the so-called "draft" in the Third District to succeed the late Rep. Karl Stefan. Then, he said:

"If you want to ask me whether I would resign so Charley could appoint me to the senate in case of a vacancy there, the answer is no. I'm going to serve my term as governor."

That would appear to be flat enough, but the skeptics recall that Peterson himself thought he was "boxed" by the party in the third district vacancy. He appeared convinced he would have to become the GOP candidate to succeed Stefan.

"Sweden's are unpredictable," somebody said at that time and how right that was! That's why some people—including this reporter—are not willing to bet that Peterson is completely out of the running.

Sweden's are unpredictable.

Closed Incident
The charges of Joseph Nekuda, a discharged state motor fuels inspector, that he was asked to campaign for Governor Peterson in a state car and at state expense, have been dismissed by the governor as a "closed incident."

But State Sen. Hugh Carson, of Ord, a candidate for the GOP gubernatorial nomination yelled, "Whitewash!"

Carson, who appears to be campaigning against Peterson, rather than Mayor Anderson and North Platte's Robert B. Crosby, said Peterson's remarks were of the same kind that "whitewashed" the investigation of the wholesale liquor industry which he forced during the last legislature.

Peterson's remarks followed publication of a letter from Nekuda's former boss, Agriculture Director Rufus Howard, which said the discharged employee was guilty of "the most outstanding example of misconduct" in making unauthorized trips as a state inspector.

Employees are cautioned not to campaign on state time, Howard said, "but it is understandable in the heat of a campaign, employees do not always adhere to this rule."

Atkinson Man Struck In Face by Saw

ATKINSON—L. E. McDowell walked into the blade of a hand saw Tuesday, November 22, when he happened to walk by a stretch of wall on the opposite side of which a carpenter at the McDowell home was working.

Mr. Carroll, the carpenter, was sawing from the opposite side of the partition so of course, did not see Mr. McDowell and Mr. McDowell did not see the saw in time to avoid the accident. The saw came through the wall exactly at the level of his eyes.

The cut on the eyelid required several stitches. He says he considers himself very lucky. Not long ago, Mrs. McDowell's hand was caught under the window as it came down, cutting a vein. She was alone at the time.
