15 Registered Herefords Top Sale

- We are expecting around 400 head of feeder pigs and 800 head of fat hogs at today's sale. Cattle receipts are estimated around 500. The fat cattle market was unevenly steady to 50c lower earlier this week at the terminals.
- The cattle offering will consist mainly of calves, yearlings and cows. There will be 15 head of choice registered Hereford bulls consigned by Don DeVoss, of Cantrill, Ia. These bulls are well-bred, good, rugged 2-year-olds and uniformly better bulls than DeVoss's fine special consignment a year ago.

State Capitol News...

Val's Move Leaves Dwight Clear Field

LINCOLN—Frederick Valdemar Erastus Peterson vs. Hugh Alfred Butler.

That's the ticket in the republican primary contest for U. S. senator.

Governor Peterson last week spurned the "easy road to Washington" and announced he would stay in the ring with Senator Butler and battle the Omahan in his bid for a third 6-year term. Thus, Former Gov. Dwight Griswold, now a Gering banker, was left—for the time being, at least—without a primary opponent for the 2 years left of the late Kenneth S. Wherry's term. When the governor appointed Fred Seaton, of Hastings, to the interim term, the Hastings publisher said he would not be a candidate for reelection.

Reaction —

The first blush of reaction here in Lincoln was favorable to the governor's choice.

Editorialized the Lincoln Star: "After much soul-searching (the governor) picked the right road. He will seek the long term which means that he will contest with Hugh Butler, difficult though a campaign with Butler may be... He started out on his senate business in the belief that he could do a better job of representing the people of Nebraska in Washington than Senator Butler, the latter completing a second term in office distinguished only by the fact that he was one of the undistinguished members of that body."

Said the Lincoln Journal:

"Once again, as when he rejected the effort of the Butler people to side track him into the race for Third district congress, Val Peterson has shown an inclination to act on the belief that in politics, as otherwise, a straight line is always the shortest between two points."

"The governor can beat Butler enough, surely to see that it is an imposition to ask them to settle for anything less than the full and energetic representation in Washington in the six man-killing 'ears ahead.'"

Relaxed —

The governor's announcement provoked a sigh of relief from Griswold supporters in the statehouse. Many persons holding positions in Peterson's administration and who are also friendly to the former governor had been trying to figure just which way to jump. Now they could relax.

Griswold, himself, said, "I appreciate that Governor Peterson, had he filed against me, would have been an active and vigorous opponent. However I anticipate that I will have some opposition and I expect to make an active and aggressive campaign." Senator Butler told Washington reporters, the governor's decision, "makes no difference."
