What a lot of commands! What restrictions on the children's freedom! But who can question that a mother has both the right and the duty to give such com-

Ever since Christ said to Peter: "Feed my lambs, feed my sheep," holy mother church has exercised the right and duty to feed her children God's spiritual food and to protect them from poisons, skillfully concocted to ruin the faith and morals of the unwary. It is for this reason that the church has its index of forbidden books.

The index is widely misunderstood. It does not list by title and name all books and authors forbidden to the Catholic. In fact, those so listed are comparatively few and consist largely of works a doubt and upon which therefore the church had to make about whose character there was public decision.

The application to the great mass of Catholics is in the general rules of the index, which plainly show the type or character of work, the reading of which is dangerous to faith and morals and therefore forbidden under pain of grievous sin. If the books of such character are not known to the individual by reputation. they soon make themselves manifest in the reading; and the loy-al Catholic immediately closes such a book.

The general rules of the index closely parallel God's natural temptation; for example, by law, which forbids any man de-liberately to lead himself into such things as sinful companions, places of ill-repute, obscene plays and motion pictures.

That the index hampers freedom of thought is not true, unless license to absorb error and to dwell on impurity can be called "freedom of thought." And the church is eminently fair and practical. Just as the doctor or chemist is permitted to use drugs and poisons forbidden to the masses, so the well - fortified Catholic teacher or scholar may be dispensed by the proper auformes from such rules of index, the observance of which would interfere with some neces-
