BACHELOR OR NOT ...

some baby sitter!

It's hard to stump a telephone man. Take Installer-Repairman Carl Walch* for example. Arriving at the Nelson home to put in an extension, he found Mrs. Nelson feeding baby Roy in the kitchen.

"I'll have to unlock the basement door," she told him. "But if I stop feeding the baby now, he's sure to start crying."

"Let me take over," said Carl reassur-ingly. "I've had some experience."

A rusty lock delayed Mrs. Nelson several minutes. When she hurried back, baby was contently stuffed with cereal;

Carl was expertly testing the bottle of milk by the time-honored method—drops

Although he's a bachelor, Carl, it seems, has six nieces and nephews—all under five—and he's just about their favorite baby-sitter. Oh, yes—he's got a way with telephones, too!

on the forearm.

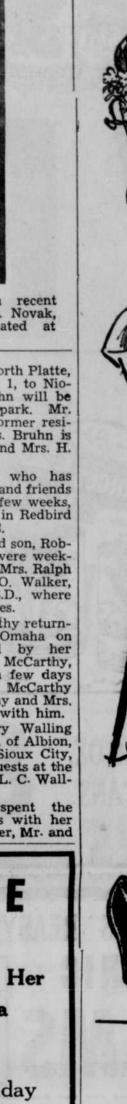

MOST PEOPLE "pay" their telephone bill with far fewer hours of work than it took ten years ago. On top of that, the service is vastly better—faster, more efficient, and you can call about twice as many people. But on the other hand, the service costs far more to supply. The rates we charge must cover these costs and provide a reasonable return for those who have invested money in the business.
