No Ruffled Dust-Catcher Lamps in Picture Window in New Pease Home

By BLANCHE SPANN PEASE

Don't look now but isn't that a purple anemone waving in the breeze along the pasture fence? You know, some of you call them daisies. Most of them are white but some are blue or purple. How I used to love to gather them when going to-and-from school and Bob used to come with a bunch clasped in a grimy fist.

The meadow out in front of the old house was always rich in flowers through May and June. There is a sloping meadow and a view for miles in front of our new home, and our picture window really frames a lovely picture view the year around. I have no intention of hamming things up by putting one of those ruffled dust-catcher lamps in our picture window, when nature has so much better views to offer. It will be a changing panorama every month.

As a matter of fact, we have a good view in every direction. Our old orchard (we have two orchards, one new one we started when we bought our place several years ago) lies north of the house, close enough so I can sneak over and snipe apple peach, cherry and plum blossoms for the house.

A lot of different varieties grow near the house, too.

Our lawn, when we get it started and the yard fixed, will slope down in front of the house on a gradual slope so we should have better drainage. I lost many iris and various bulbs every year because the old yard was so wet. The drainage was so poor many things just naturally died because of too much water.

I used a novel idea over my kitchen stove in our new home. I used a tier of birch shelves, set not vertically but on a horizontal scope. These form small bins for the clock, hot holders, seasoning used at the stove and such things.

Newspapers Can Prevent Earaches!

Dear Frontier Woman: Any kind of weather can be expected this month, I suppose. In Nebraska you can expect to have rain, snow, sunshine, wind and freezing temperatures all in the same day!

This is the time when mothers have a time getting Johnny and Mary dressed properly so they won't catch cold for when they start for school in the morning the sun may be shining and temperature normal, but by the time Miss Jones dismisses them it may be cloudy, windy and snowing like mad!

Just a little hint: It might be old fashioned but it helps like everything if you will see that there are old newspapers at the school house so Miss Jones will have one when the occasion arises. Just slip two or three thick ones under that thin jacket Johnnie wore. Maybe Mary even came without her head scarf. Fold the newspapers two or three sheets lengthwise and fasten the towel around her head. That's better than having to cry with an earache.

After what we went through in his vicinity a few years ago, it isn't a bad idea to know some of the things that our grandparents did. Did you ever use newspapers wrapped around your feet and then put on your overshoes. Try it some time when the mercury is down to around 20 below and you have to go do chores. (Next winter, I'm talking about.)

Another help is to have a small piece of paper a little larger than the rubber heels we find on most every pair of shoes nowadays. Place paper over heel, then put on your overshoe and make the overshoes go on more easily and also it saves ripping out like they do when too much strain is put on it day after day.

Do you have to buy a jar of paste every time you go to town for your children to paste with at home? Here's a good library paste recipe which may help some teacher as well as some mother. This recipe makes one pint:

LIBRARY PASTE

Mix 1/2 cup sugar and 1/2 cup flour thoroughly in a pan and add one pint of water, stir well and add 1/2 teaspoon of powdered alum. Cook until thick, stirring constantly. Add about 15 drops of clove oil. This keeps it from spoiling.

Life is like olives. Sometimes you have to learn to like it.

If you didn't vote in the primaries, don't gripe about the candidates.

If you have a man who tells you you look pretty and helps with the dishes sometimes, too, hang on to him. He's a precious jewel.

Nebraska — "Oiling Up for the Future"

Do you know that Nebraska has more acre (8,000,000) under oil lease than any of the surrounding states?

Oil was first discovered in Nebraska only about 12 years ago, at a well three miles east of Falls City. Today, Nebraska's oil production is well over 1,000,000 barrels a year. Our growing oil industry is just one more achievement about which Nebraskans can boast.

You can be equally proud of our state's brewing industry which, for years, has carried on an educational campaign with retailers on the importance of approved tavern operation.

As a result of this program, the general operation of Nebraska's taverns merits high praise.
