Out of Old Nebraska

Indian Tribe Helps in Promoting West

Wyandots Seek Early Government

By JAMES C. OLSON
Supt. State Hist. Soc.

We frequently think that the Indians' only contribution to the settlement of the West was an effort to impede the process. Actually, the Wyandot Indians, a branch of the Huron, who moved from Ohio to Kansas in 1843, were very active in promoting the organization of Nebraska territory.

The westward trek of the Wyandots was made pursuant to the government's early 19th-century policy of removing all of the Indian tribes to the region west of the Missouri. The tribe ceded its lands in Ohio to the government in 1842, and the next year bought land from the Delaware in the forks of the Missouri and Kansas rivers.

The Wyandots, last of the tribes to relinquish their lands in Ohio, brought a highly developed culture with them. They had a well-organized Methodist church (the result of earlier effort among them by Methodist missionaries), a Free Mason's lodge, a civil government, and a code of written laws which provided for an elective council of chiefs, the punishment of crime and the maintenance of order.

Under the leadership of William Walker, the Wyandots pressed for a treaty which would recognize them as citizens of the United States. When they failed in their effort to secure this concession, they did their best to foster the organization of Nebraska territory.

During the winter of 1851-52 they petitioned congress to establish a territorial government for Nebraska. When this effort failed, they decided to elect a delegate to the Thirty-second congress and send him back to Washington to plead their cause in person. Abelard Guthrie was their unanimous choice, and as I mentioned in an earlier column, he thus became the first delegate to congress from Nebraska territory, if only from the provisional territory.

Guthrie's efforts were to no more avail than the tribe's earlier attempts had been. Nevertheless the Wyandots went ahead with their plans for organizing a territorial government.

On August 9, 1853, the day appointed for their national festival, the Green Corn Feast, they formed a provisional government of Nebraska territory, and elected William Walker governor.

By this time the movement for organizing Nebraska was well underway in Washington and the provisional government hardly had a chance to begin functioning before it was replaced by the regularly constituted territorial government. As finally set up, the Wyandots found themselves in Kansas rather than Nebraska—a situation which resulted from the decision to organize two territories rather than one.

The Wyandot story, nevertheless, is important in the early history of Nebraska and the Wyandots played a significant role in the movement leading to territorial status for that vast country between the Missouri river and the Rocky mountains.

Feeder Hogs Still Under Quarantine

Dr. E. P. Anderson of Lincoln, state veterinarian, said Saturday the department of agriculture will continue a tight rein on the hog quarantine situation.

Between 12 thousand and 13 thousand animals which may have been exposed to vesicular exanthema are under quarantine in Nebraska.

One small lot near Omaha was quarantined Friday, but no new cases of the disease have been found in the state since the first of the month.

The disease, which resembles hoof and mouth disease in cattle, has been reported in 14 states.

A subcommittee of state and federal officials, of which Doctor Anderson is chairman, has urged Secretary of Agriculture Branman to declare an emergency and take drastic steps to wipe out the disease.

Doctor Anderson said Saturday he was confident the federal department would act on the recommendation.

He returned to Nebraska Friday from a conference in Washington.

O'Neill Man Writes Another Tune

F. E. Parkins, Consumers Public Power district merchandiser who writes music and words for music as a hobby, has received copies of another of his tunes that has been recorded. The latest is entitled, "That Gal at Levi's".

It was heard on the "Voice of The Frontier" program twice—the first times on the air.

Last fall Mr. Parkins' earlier tune, "Don't Turn Your Back on the Lord", was given a good play across the nation but never gained the status of a top-tune.

Mr. Parkins has written "about one hundred songs" and he confidently hopes to "hit" one of these days.

Thursday Star Specials

HERE THEY ARE! Each and everyone a real moneysaving bargain for Thursday shoppers in O'Neill. Tune in to the "Voice of The Frontier" each Wednesday morning at 9:45 for a preview of the next day's STAR SPECIALS. Watch The Frontier each week for the page of Thursday Only STAR SPECIALS!!

Dry Pastures Increase Volume

- Looks like a good sale today (Thursday). The volume has been noticeably picking up at the O'Neill market. Some of this marketing activity is attributed to the fact that some cattle are being crowded out of pastures due to drought conditions. Already in the yards is a package of 53 yearlings, all carrying the same brand. In another package are 40 head of cornfed yearlings, and there are several other packages of calves and yearlings. The cattle supply was the heaviest in three months Monday at Omaha.
- Fat cattle sold unevenly steady to 50c lower; cow values skidded 50c to $1.
- The embargo is still in effect on feeder hogs. However, fat hogs, ready for slaughter, are still being sold. At the river terminal markets earlier this week hogs were selling strong to 25c higher.
