

Rural Youth Group

Tours M & M —
The O'Neill Rural Youth met Friday, February 13, at the court-house annex.

Several of the members gave reports on meetings they had attended. Elsie Peter had gone to Jane Farewell's recreation school in Norfolk. Bobby Martens told of his experiences at midwinter institute at Lincoln.

Mr. Dawes, Mrs. Kreymoborg, Bob and Helen Martens were in Amelia recently to help organize a Rural Youth club that community.

Mr. Tanner, the craft teacher, will be in O'Neill March 6 and 7 at the Methodist church basement. For the special February meeting, we will have a roller skating party, February 25, in Atkinson. Everyone is urged to attend.

Three members have sent in their registration to attend the Great Plains laboratory at Nysted in March.

There was a tour of the bakery and kitchen at the M & M cafe.

Cliff and Twila Sobotka were on the refreshment committee. The next meeting is to be held Friday, March 13.

A son of former O'Neill residents has joined the paperback detective story school of writers and come up with 78-thousand racy words about a private eye named O'Reilly.

The new author is Robert Soukup, 35, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard E. Soukup, 540 NE 25th st., Ft. Lauderdale, Fla. The writer's mother is the former Josie Carlon, daughter of the late Judge and Mrs. Carlon of O'Neill. Young Soukup's relatives here include Stanley Soukup, an uncle, and Bert Shoemaker, an uncle by marriage.

Some critics are predicting that Soukup's O'Reilly will give Mike Hammer and Sam Spade a run for their money in the paperback field.

His first book, "Unruly O'Reilly," was hammered out in four weeks and was published last fall by the American Publishing Co. Soukup sold it on the basis of two chapters of sex and murder.

It was the first try at a novel for the 35-year-old fighter plane ace who took 4½ years out to shoot down 7 German planes in the late war.

Young Soukup sold his first story at the age of 24. It was a short piece purchased by Colliers. He quit his literary work when he began flying air force planes, took a whirl at the cosmetics business in Florida, and was prompted to write "Unruly O'Reilly" after a friend, Larry Wilson, approached him with a Life magazine article on Mickey Spillane, the current rage of the paperbacks.

"Why don't you write a book?" urged Wilson. Soukup wrote one, and is now writing another about the same character. He's entitled it, "Now, Really, O'Reilly."

"After one or two more O'Reilly efforts I'm going to try and write something good," says the young author.

The first one came easy. He had knocked off five chapters before he had decided how he was going to end it, packing it with unsavory characters, questionable women and salty dialogue. Then, he got an idea for the ending, wrote the last three chapters and filled in the middle.

He composes in long hand—"I can't think on a typewriter"—and when the mood is there the words and plot spill out in an endless stream. He once wrote 11,000 words in one night.

After completing a section in longhand, he types it out, changing a word or two here, a line there, and that's it. No rewriting. The language is strong, earthy and unmistakable.

Some of his more enthusiastic friends say he will out-Spillane Spillane.

"Unruly O'Reilly" begins with the murder of a wealthy banker, speeds through a welter of vice, corruption, tempestuous love and two more murders and comes up with a tricky ending.

Soldier-Son Home on Leave Feted
DORSEY—Mr. and Mrs. W. Lloyd Brady of Dorsey were hosts to a basket dinner on Sunday in honor of their son, Pfc. William ("Bill") Brady, who was home on a two weeks furlough from Ft. Hood, Tex.
