

The Frontier Woman Old Woman's Dream Can Give Comfort to Mothers of Small Boys

By BLANCHE SPANN PEASE

Hope you got all those gladiolus planted in late April and through May. If you want to have some special glads, hope you didn't think you can relax now!

You should keep cultivating around glads from the start when they come up. If you still plan to plant some this week, they should be large bulbs if you expect them to bloom before frost.

June is the time to spray and feed the gladiolus. When two inches high, start spraying for thrips. The rotenone sprays are usually fine and it should be done every week or two. When there are three or four leaves on the glads, it's time to start to feed.

One good way to do this is by making a shallow trench along one side of the row, about four inches from the plants and scattering in balanced plant food (half a cupful for each 10 feet).

Cover with two inches of soil and water. Feed all the rows again when spikes begin to appear.

Our glads, about two hundred of them, all went into the garden this year. They do better there as they get better cultivation than if they were in the border. Our early garden is close enough to the house that it can be watered.

Nothing likes rich soil quite so much as pansies. They like a good spongy soil and they're delighted if it has peat moss in it. Add a rounding tablespoon of complete plant food for each square foot of pansy bed, when you set them out, and water daily so they quickly utilize the plant food. They'll reward you with whoppers of blooms, bigger than you thought possible.

Boylest Town
Dreariest on Earth—
Mrs. Victor Frickel of Atkinson wins our three-months' subscription to The Frontier.

Dear Blanche:
I wonder how many of your readers note on Ann Batchelder's recipes in the Ladies Home Journal like I do?

Here is one I have been using for quite a few years now. It's grand for a hot meal in the winter, a quickie for washday, a dish-washing saver for Sunday noon meal, perfect for company dinner, good for your own family dinner, a grand one-dish meal for any day, any season.

BEEF GOULASH WITH
NOODLES

Have four pounds beef cut as you do for any stew. A goulash is stew with a slight disguise.
Season the pieces with salt and pepper. Dredge with flour. Brown the beef on all sides in hot shortening. Add two cloves garlic (minced), two cups chopped onions and five tablespoons paprika. Add one quart water, 1/4 cup tomato paste, cover tightly and simmer about two hours or until the meat is very tender.
Lift out the meat, skim off the fat, add a can of beef broth to the gravy, if there doesn't seem to be enough. Cook 1 1/2 packages wide noodles in boiling, salted water until tender. Drain. Rinse with boiling water. Add the noodles to the beef and gravy, mix well. Put into a casserole.
Serve when it's ready or keep it hot in a moderate oven 350 F. for a few minutes.

I would like to add a word of comfort (?), to mothers of boys, especially small boys.

THE BOYLESS TOWN
A cross old woman of long ago declared she hated noise.
"The town would be so pleasant, you know, if only there were no boys!"

She scolded and fretted about it 'til her eyes grew heavy as lead, and then of a sudden the town grew still for all the boys had fled! And all through the long and dusty street there wasn't a boy in view! The baseball lot where they used to meet was a sight to make one blue.

The grass was growing on every base, and the paths that the runners made, for there wasn't a soul in all the place, who knew how the game was played!

The dogs were sleeping the live-long day. Why should they bark and leap? There wasn't a whistle or call to play, and so they would only sleep. The pony neighed from his lonely stall, and longed for his saddle and rein, and even the birds on the garden wall chirped only a dull refrain.

The cherries rattled and went to waste—there was no one to climb the trees. And nobody had a single taste, save only the birds and bees. There wasn't a messenger boy, not one, to speed such messengers can. If people wanted their errands done, they sent for a messenger man.

There was little, I guess, of frolic and noise.

There was less of cheer and mirth. The sad old town, since it lacked the boys, was the dreariest place on earth!

The poor old woman began to weep, then woke with a sudden scream. "Dear me!" she cried, "I've been asleep—and oh, what a horrible dream!"
