'Thank God for Dirty Dishes'

By BLANCHE SPANN PEASE
It dries rapidly. Seeds can be picked up easily and put in place by using a tooth pick with cement on the tip.
After completion of your picture, give seeds and background a coating of clear varnish and let it dry. The picture can be mounted on plywood or in a frame, without glass. Seeds of many different kinds can be used from flowers, grasses, trees, farm crops, fruits and vegetables. I saw one picture that had 40 different seeds, some of them were turnips, clover, wheat, hollyhock, gourd, yellow striped and white corn, popcorn and many others. There is no end to the interesting pattern that can be worked out, and truly worth your time, because they are beautiful.
This was a busy summer for me as I had a big garden and therefore I did lots of canning. It is a wise idea, for everyone who has a pressure canner, to take the pressure gauges to the county extension office, to have them checked for accuracy. Having them checked now, will save time for next year's use and it will always be ready for use.
Here is a recipe for gingerbread which is light and moist, and really delicious. It will be fine to serve those Halloween pranksters.

GINGERBREAD
One cup white sugar, one cup molasses, 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon, two teaspoons soda, 2 1/2 cups flour, one cup salad oil, one cup boiling water, one teaspoon ginger (well beaten).
Combine dry ingredients and sift together. Mix sugar and salad oil, molasses and dissolve soda in boiling water. Add to the sugar mixture; then add the dry ingredients and the eggs last. Pour mixture into a greased square pan and bake at 350 F for about 40 minutes.

Philosophic Prudence Wins Subscription
Dear Frontier Woman:
I have a little verse tacked up by my sink that has helped me. I hope it will help to take some of the drudgery out of dishwashing for The Frontier Readers. I don't know the author, but here it is:
Thank God for dirty dishes; They have a tale to tell. While others go hungry We're eating very well. With home and health and happiness I shouldn't want to fuss. For by this lack of evidence, God's very good to us.

An idea for anyone with an artistic touch and leisure time is the making of "seed pictures." Here's how to make them:
Use number two sandpaper for the background. Give it a thin coating of clear varnish and let it dry. The paper should be larger than the design, so the picture will not look too crowded. To begin, get the "feel" of making seed pictures by making a small one. Draw your pattern on the sandpaper, and arrange some of the seeds on the pattern to see which combinations look best.

After experimenting a bit, apply just enough cement for one flower at a time, because
