Some Can't Bear Others' Success

By BLANCHE SPANN PEASE

Have you ever tried keeping the corners of your mouth turned up all day as you go about town meeting this person or that? You will see an astonishing lot of radiant smiles in a few hours, if you're first with a smile on your face.

There is something about cheerfulness that is catching, and something about mannerliness and courtesy that is communicated to others.

If you jump all over someone, what happens? In self-defense they proceed to jump onto you in return. And they probably never have much use for you again.

Often one meets a person who has nothing but good to say of others and it usually turns out that the person who does not continually pick someone else to pieces is a pretty likeable person in their own right.

There are people who never can stand the success of others. If someone else gets a new dress, hair-do, or friend, or a new car, buys a place or builds a house, the "tear-downer" has nothing but unkind things to say.

Let an accomplishment or an honor come their way and they have nothing good to say either.

One of the best tests of being a well balanced and likeable person is being able to be genuinely happy for the possessions, accomplishments and successes which come to other people.

RHUBARB JAM
 Four cups rhubarb (cut up), four cups sugar one box cherry flavored gelatine, one small can crushed pineapple.

Put rhubarb and sugar in pan and stir. Watch carefully as it has to form its own juice. When it starts to boil good, time 15 minutes by the clock. Take from stove, stir in gelatine, put in jar and cool (a small can of crushed pineapple may be added to mixture.)
