It Happened In NEBRASKA--

 This is Bellevue, Nebraska, in 1810—first permanent white settlement in the state! Indians came from hundreds of miles to dispose of their furs and make purchases. This "wilderness" trading post was set up by the American Fur Company just six years after Lewis and Clark first camped here.
 What changes since those early days—in EVERY phase of life! Primitive tavern methods, for example, have given way to a new era in tavern operation. Today's taverns are well-kept, orderly—reflecting the wishes of the community.
