Victorian Ideas—1954 Style

Creations of the prim and proper Victorian era were the ruffled nightdress and linoleum which electrified homemakers of that day as an amazing new covering for wood kitchen floors. Here are 1954's up-to-date versions to capture a young girl's fancy with colorful fashion and appeal to a mother's practical viewpoint. Billowy nightgown, trimmed in nylon, never needs ironing. Master linoleum combines a warm foot-theat texture with a smooth dirt-shedding surface. A new and functional feature is pattern that goes all the way through to the backing so wear spots don't show.

KELLY RYAN Spreadaway

Here's a husky, all steel manure spreader that is really built to take it. The new type single beater will completely pulverize and spread the toughest load. The unit is power-take-off operated for maximum efficiency, regardless of ground condition. Only 1 enclosed oil bath gear box and 3 drive chains in the entire unit. Depth of the spread is governed by the speed of the vehicle pulling it.

ADD SIDE BOARDS FOR A SELF-UNLOADING WAGON

To convert the Spreadaway to a 150 bushel self-unloading wagon, simply add side boards and end gate. The optional wooden or metal side boards flare to an overall width of 6 feet. The end gate is of metal reinforced wood construction and is extra high so that additional side boards may be added. The unit gives you a crops wagon that you'll use hundreds of times for very little added cost.

REMOVE BEATER FOR A HIGH SPEED UTILITY TRAILER

By removing 4 bolts you can detach the beater and have a trailer that trails perfectly at highway speeds. Handy for a thousand and one chores.

FRONT OR REAR FEED BUNK FEEDER

A man with a few cattle on feed can make this attachment really pay. The low cost "Feedaway" is easily attached to the rear end of the Spreadaway when beater is removed, or to the front end when box is reversed. The bunk feeder attachment is P-T-O operated through the spreader gear box for fast, smooth, controlled feeding.
