Minister's Auto

Overturms, Damaged

STUART—Rev. and Mrs. D. D. Su had a narrow escape from serious injury about 2 p.m. Wednesday, July 14, near West Point when their car overturned and was badly damaged.

When a tire blewout, Reverend Su applied the brakes which caused the car to overturn twice—landing on its wheels.

The Sus were taken to the hospital where Reverend Su had a gash on his lip sewed. Both were bruised and shaken, but were dismissed and rushed to the bus depot to complete their journey to Omaha where Reverend Su had a 3 o'clock appointment.

He was a little late for the appointment. Both returned to Stuart on the 7:30 a.m. passenger train last Thursday morning.

ELEVATOR ENLARGED

NORFOLK—Construction has begun on an addition which would increase by six times the capacity of the largest grain elevator in Norfolk. The work for the Norfolk Grain and Feed company is scheduled to be completed by September 15. Twelve additional tubes with five bins, to hold 245-thousand-bushels, are being added.

gentle decline his wheelchair may easily be lowered to the car at the curb.

With his handicap, Curley, of course, is unable to do any slabbing of large stones but can do nicely with the smaller ones or pieces cut from larger stones. He always appreciates any small amounts of assorted gem cutting materials and many of his admiring fans from all over the country send them to him by mail or leave them in person.

Readers of this article may, as a token of good will to one who has been afflicted with a dreadful malady, wish to send him prepaid small amounts of any material of this nature they may find or have on hand. His address is Curley Washechek, Bedside Lapidary, O'Neill, Nebr.

This appeal is purely bona fide and carries the full endorsement of several lapidary and mineralogist magazines over the nation.

He is listed under the title of "Bedside Lapidary, Curley Washechek, O'Neill, Nebr." in the following national magazines: "Rocks and Minerals," "Mineralogist," "Lapidary Journal" and "Gems and Minerals." The "Rocks and Minerals" magazine carried one of my feature articles on the unique sand crystals of Snake buttes in the Potato creek area of Washabaugh county on the Pine Ridge Indian reservation of South Dakota a year or so ago.

In order to have a large variety of stones and other working materials, Curley imports crystal pagodas, rock crystal stars, necklaces, earrings and the like, as well as carved articles of jade, including tiny elephants, lions, etc., for collectors' items.

These and other lovely articles are made into beautiful jewelry in his home bedside workshop or are sold to his customers as they are received from his importers. He caters largely to the mail order trade he has built up during the years he has been in the business.

The story of Curley Washechek's life is the amazing, true
