Select Few Enjoy Columbus Day

By ROMAINE SAUNDERS, Retired, Former Editor The Frontier

LINCOLN-Standing today in view of the entrance to a bank afforded a study of human nature. One by one they came, men and women, men with a grip on something in a rear pants pocket and with an air of dominate purpose grab the bank door latch for an impatient jerk.

Bank closed, October 12, Columbus day, a holiday in Nebraska. Holiday for bankers, city hall, courthouse and statehouse workers. Printers, store clerks, grease wipers at filling stations and everybody but a few select are on the job as usual. What did Columbus do for Nebraska? Not much, though we have a town named in his honor. But he did something at a period in world history that changed the face of things.

In the face of opposition and ridicule by churchmen and the wise guys of his day, he set sail and headed west for India. He landed on an island was met by a few friendly Indians and thought he had arrived in the Far East but didn't know just where he had been when he got back to Spain while his shipmates said they had been to a land loaded with gold. Spanish adventurers flocked to the new world after gold. The real discoverers of North America were the sea-roving Norsemen at an earlier period.

And when the Spaniards were after gold, North Europeans came to the new world for freedom to worship God.

Tuesday, Ocober 6, 1903, Ed Tierney and Miss Cleoa Fleener were issued a marriage license by Judge Morgan. . . Joe Dennis of the Cleveland neighborhood harvested a field of oats that yielded 80 bushels to the acre. . . October 8 that year Father Cassidy celebrated the 25th anniversary of his ministry as a priest by giving the pupils at St. Mary's academy a half holiday. . . Will and Mable son and daugther of Mr. and Mrs. S. F. McNichols went to Clo, Ia., on a visit to their grandparents.

. . . The 25th infantry from Ft. Niobrara, composed mostly of Negroes, were in town for a day and a night, which gave a colored lad employed in Maylon Price's barber shop the pleasure of associating with a lot of black-skinned fellows. . . O. O. Snyder, S. J. Weeks and Harvey Stocking went to Lincoln to attend Odd Fellows grand lodge.

The Frontier of October 14 tells of life's activities having come to an end for three Holt county pioneers. Tom Donlin, P. C. Gallagher and Clyde Johnson have answered the call of the drumbeat of eternity. Time writes its wrinkles on the brow of man and out of the shadows of night the summons comes. These three men each exceeded the allotted span of three score years and 10, each acting a part in the development of a land where now they find rest in Candidates stumped the state. Little interest taken in public affairs, which means either Nebraskans are satisfied with things as they are or there is a serious decline in our concern over who is placed in public office, a lack of patriotic interest in the things that should concern every citizen. And it may be political parties have outlived their usefulness. Campaigning before elections is more or less pastisan hogwash and legislative proposals are not considered so much in the light of what is beneficial to the country as a whole but what will be a boost for a certain political group. Partisans -yes; but Americans first.

Hollywood, Calif., is the world show center. There also is located the First Presbyterian church, the largest of that denomination's places of worship in the world. The church supports six choirs made up of 350 singers.

Editor Stewart is promoting a county historical plan that should meet widespread approval. Other Nebraska counties are doing something in the way of preserving memories of the pioneer life of the community they represent. Holt county is rich in material of historic interest and an organization to bring this material into a central place is devoutly | and the freshman senator was picto be wished for. Few counties in Nebraska or elsewhere have sent forth such an array of able men and women who have made an impression on the state and nation as came from the prairies of Holf

Approximately 104,490 Nebraskans visited the "Centennial Car" as it went from place-to-place over the state railways the past summer. The car had a display of State Historical society museum items that proved a great attraction. Relics of pioneer days are much sought after. A few communities in the state have adopted the museum idea and have opened small show places. The Women's club at Wayne is promoting such an enterprise.

What is said to be an ancient Indian cemetery is reported to have been discovered on the farm of Martin Corliss near the town of Hebron.

By the middle of October fatal crackups on Nebraska highways cost the lives of 244. But a husky gent down in Custer county fell 65 feet from a tower to earth and lives to tell about it. Some contend that speeding has nothing to do with highway crashes. Why then have official speed limits? There are avoidable and unavoidable car accidents. And human shortcomings assure us, then, there always will be accidents.

The Nebraska Bar associations are on record favoring some amendments to the federal constitution, notably the ease with which some have been sliding out from under by claiming "constitutional exemption." The Nebraska lawyers propose that a majority of the states concurring should make effective porposed amendments.

Nelson Versus Rohde

One of the important contests in next Tuesday's election viewed from the state-county level is the Twenty-eighth legislative district race between Frank Nelson of O'Neill, veteran state senator who is seeking reelection, and Donald Rohde, who lists Lincoln as his address, but has, in fact, spent most of the last 10 years out of the district.

The Frontier frequently has had kind things to say concerning Senator Nelson and his record in the Nebraska unicameral legislature.

Senator Nelson is a man of considerable and succesful business experience. He is a farm owner and operator who understands the problems of the district he represents. During these past few years in the unicameral, he has steadfastly stood for lower taxes, home rule on all local problems; he has doggedly battled special interest legislation and has, to the very best of his ability, been a highly capable representative for the district as a whole.

His honesty and sincerity are beyond reproach. His neighbors and those who know him are anxious to testify that Mr. Nelson is a fine, honest, Christian gentleman, who fortunately for the constituents, is willing to serve in the legislaturethis in view of the fact he does so at a personal Senator Nelson has aided in securing 60 miles of blacktop in his four-county district (Holt, Boyd, Rock and Keya Paha counties).

Senator Nelson is courageous in his legislative endeavors. No one, knowing his full story and his background on the various issues, would question his honesty and integrity in working for the best interest of the most people.

The Frontier does not have Senator Nelson's consent, permission or encouragement in the preparation of this editorial.

Mr. Rohde was out of the district to serve in military uniform during World War II (like 15 million other people) and for a time he served in Germany during the recent Korean war. He is a law student at the University of Nebraska and has been living in Lincoln, making frequent flying trips to the district to campaign. All of which is com-

Mr. Rohde declares he is for a broadening of the tax base and has supplied newspapers in the district with handouts explaining his position. He forthrightly has declared himself in favor of a state sales tax and a state income tax. He says he was against a sales tax and income tax in Nebraska until he began research in preparation for the current campaign. After three months of study, Mr. Rohde was convinced the state income tax and state sales tax are just the checker to better the taxation ills in Nebraska.

Mr. Rohde, by virue of his professions during the past 10 years, has acquired little, if any, business experience and no experience in state and county government. The Frontier seriously questions how well Mr. Rohde understands the practical aspects of law making.

The Frontier prefers to leave Nebraska's tax problems as well as the other forms of legislation in the hands of a grey-haired gentleman who has had ample success in his own right, a man who understands the problems of his district and the problems of the state, and one who won't change paper is a member of the Nebraska Press Associahis mind in a matter of three months over such important issues as whether or not to impose a sales tax and income tax on people of this state.

A sales tax might be an ultimate aid in equalizing the tax burden, but The Frontier would prefer to abide by the judgement of the older and wiser heads in determining when and to what extent it is to be imposed.

Your Duty As a Citizen The editor feels it appropriate in these controversial times, to point out to readers that they have certain obligations as citizens of the most powerful country in the world, which must be met if the electorate is to be able to act intelligently. One of the first duties of every citizen is that he makes an intelligent effort to be informed on the issues of the day.

This may sound trite, but keep in mind that knowledge is power and also that no citizen can act or talk intelligently if he is not acquainted with he is not acquainted with the events of the day. Also keep in mind that misinformed citizens, who make both inaccurate and confusing statements, do nothing to lift the level of understanding and intelligence in the community.

Too often in this community, as in other communities, business men and others interested in material pursuits spend little time in tryin go acquaint themselves with the true facts involved in the issues of the day. Every citizen should devote some time each day to honest search for the accurate news. That news is not necescarily found in editorials, editorial columns, or in the words of commentators. From these sources one gets opinions, although quite often, news as well.

One should take advantage of these sources of opinion to become acquainted with the various viewpoints, but each citizen should form his own opinion concerning the issues of his time.

Therefore, every citizen of this community should make the effort to read some good books regularly, read the news columns of the newspaper, and, occasionally, glance at an atlas or some map which would acquaint him somewhat with the geography of the world. The search for the facts should not be confined to national or international issues, but should also include local issues, in which much information is usually involved.

The Nebraska Cornhuskers finally pulled themselves together to score an upset of a sort. Colorado's win streak, however, wasn't any great shakes, considering the kind of opposition the Buffs had been meeting.

The world is not interested in the excellent excuse you have for your failure to deliver the (Note: The following article written by Holmes Alexander. appearing recently in the Omaaha World-Herald, aptly analyzes the irony for the beleagured Wisconsin Sen, Joseph McCarthy. Joe's Finest Hour By HOLMES ALEXANDER WASHINGTON, D.C .- Trage-

the plight of Sen. Joe McCarthy; but two indispensable elements of tragedy are in his story - irony and pathos.

Four years ago McCarthy deliberately risked his political life and integrity on the Owen Lattimore case. He charged that Lattimore. then an unheralded professor and journalist, was a secret soviet spy. It was a sensational charge. tured as a character-assassin, a bearer of false witness, a smearmonger, a devil incarnate.

He had the worst press of anybody since Hitler, and it wasn't long before this excitingly successful young American-an exjudge, an ex-marine combat aviator, A United States senator at 37-was having his name coupled with the insane monster of nazism

Looking back on those tumultuous scenes of white house denunciation, congressional uproar and journalistic blitz, I have often wondered how McCarthy kept his wits and his convictions intact. But he did and he plainly said that if he was wrong about Lattimore, he would resign from the senate. Owen Lattimore was re-indicted last week for falsely denying under path the charges that Mc-Carthy made against him. He is not yet convicted and may never be. But by all that's just and fair, this ought to be McCarthy's finest
