Turkeys Tailored To Family Size
By Marie Gifford

Today you can have turkey sized to suit your needs. Ranging in weight from 4 to 25 pounds or more, there are turkeys for every size family. The pint-sized turkeys are of the Beltsville breed. These broad-breasted, meaty junior turkeys always remain small, and they make a perfect choice for a small family.

To determine the size of bird to buy, allow a little more than one pound, dressed weight, per person for each serving. Of course, you'll buy more if you want to make the bird last for more than one meal. Both the regular large hen or tom turkeys and the junior turkeys of a star brand may be purchased fresh-ice packed or quick-frozen, fully dressed, ready to stuff, truss, and pop into the oven.

To roast your turkey, place it breast up on a V-shaped rack in a shallow, uncovered roasting pan. Cover bird loosely with moist cloth dipped in melted fat. Or brush bird generously with melted fat and cover loosely with pieces of foil. Roast in (325°F.) oven. Bird is done if thigh is soft when pressed between thumb and forefinger or if joint moves easily.
