News, Views and Gossip
BY THE EDITOR
No New Ones
Years ago when the West River country of South Dakota was opened up for settlement, a tall and dapper young man, fresh out of law school, Drake university (Des Moines, Ia.), was making the rounds of the town. He was being escorted by one of the businessmen who had reached the young town a few years earlier.
The young lawyer, R. V. Fletcher (recently of O'Neill Drive-In theater fame), was proud, eager and anxious to establish himself in the new country.
Fletcher and his escort stopped off at the town's only hardware store, operated by two brothers, Lem and Clem.
Fletcher was properly introduced to Clem, in front of the building near the door.
Clem hollered at his partner-brother, who was in the rear.
"Hey, Lem, come meet the new lawyer in town!"
"Sorry," came the impassioned voice from the rear, "I'm not making any new acquaintances!"
Fifteen years ago, Fletcher related the experience to me when we both lived at Hartington.
On Wednesday afternoon I was having a cup of coffee at the K&M cafe. John McCarville, haberdasher-photographer, came up to me at the coffee bar and explained:
"I have a fellow I want you to meet."
Nothing unusual about that. John is noted for introducing strangers to folks about town. It did not appear he had anyone in tow.
In a wisecrack vein, I borrowed from Lem, the West River hardware dealer of yesterday.
"Sorry," sayeth me, "I'm not making any new acquaintances!"
I turned around and there was a dark-haired, bespectacled man in a black Homburg and dark overcoat.

"I want you to meet Samuel Sorin," Johnnie continued, rolling with the punch in great shape.
Sorin smiled and extended his hand.
I shook hands with the famous concert pianist and went out the crack under the door.

Miscellany
Mrs. Carl Christon is our Riverside correspondent. In a footnote in her correspondence this week she stated: "Dad and Mother had to bury old Queenie, the dog. Queenie had been a pal for the kids for 10 years. Kind of sad."
There was eloquence of the C&N's Pullman one morning recently when a lady passenger stepped from the train in her bathrobe. She hurried to the waiting taxi. The cabbie told us the passenger, an Omaha woman who frequently visits here, had overslept and time did not permit the change. After the recent snowfall, a little fellow in our block, age 8, hustled out to clear the walks. He came back disgusted, complaining "the wind shoveled out walk!" Mrs. Merle Spangler of Dorsey forwarded this one: "Our 5-year-old Veldon started to kindergarten in January. For some time he has envied his older brother, Dennis, because Dennis could read comic books. Veldon came home from his first day in school, picked up his favorite comic and with tears in his eyes he moaned: 'I still can't read!'"
