Miss Green Pleases Concert-Goers Here

The artist received the sincere and enthusiastic applause of the audience in a gracious and humble manner.

Miss Green's opening number, "Sommi Dei," by George F. Handel, immediately impressed the concert-goers with her pure and clear tones.

Handel was primarily an opera composer. Many of these works have passed into oblivion, but occasionally, from these Handel operas, comes a solitary air of great beauty that has remained a favorite on the concert stage for 200 years. Such was the "Care Selve" from the opera, Atalanta, the second number of the concert.

An important composer of the Neapolitan school was Alessandro Scarlatti, who in truth, laid the foundation of the modern Italian opera. His music reflects the joyous birth of the Neapolitan. Although a master of counterpoint, his melody was of greater importance than technique. Miss Green rendered his "Qual Farfalla Amante" in true bel canto style.

The young soprano sang "Un bel di" ("One Fine Day"), one of the most popular numbers from the opera "Madame Butterfly" by Puccini, with winning simplicity.

Her phrasing was a delicate tracery of lovely lights and shades to convince her audience of her colorful singing.

In the second grouping, the artist introduced her listeners to "Stressa" by Wintter Watts, a truly beautiful melody, sung in her loveliest voice, and "Elegy," a favorite by the famous and gifted Frenchman, Massenet.

Since Schubert, no composer has written so many truly great songs as Johannes Brahms. The gifted young singer interpreted beautifully the romantic content of his "Ständchen" ("Serenade").

Although the great symphonic works of Strauss have over-shadowed his smaller compositions, his songs are among the most beautiful of German lieder. Such was his "Befreit" ("Freed") which Theresa Green sang with deep feeling and warmth.

Ruggiero Leoncavallo was a modern Italian opera composer who has but one successful opera to his name, "I Pagliacci." In his aria from this opera, "Qual fiamma aeva nel Guardo," this lovely soprano exhibited in her rare voice quality her flair for technique.

The audience showed appreciation of the music of a true artist with their sincere applause.

However, one boy was so eager his clapping was simultaneous with the last 10 bars of Miss Green's lovely aria.

Finally the teenage, non-chaperoned, ill-mannered, eager-beaver boy in the south balcony was ejected to the relief of those who had come to enjoy the concert.

The lad's conduct and some window noises, over which the grand young artist had no control, blighted the evening for some. But Miss Green showed no distraction.

Jean J. Albert provided a delightful interlude of piano music by rendering Brahms' "Intermezzo" and Chopin's "Scherzo." His precision, clarity and interpretation proved him to be a promising young pianist.

Miss Green returned with a group of songs by contemporary composers, "Floods of Spring" by the Russian, Sergei Rachmaninoff, "Youkali" by Kurt Weill, "Les Chemins de l'Amour" by the French extreme modernist, Francis Poulenc. The "Air de Lia" from "L'Enfant Prodigue" by Claude Debussy, the French originator of musical impressionism.

In all Debussy's works, he veils form with a blending of tonal combinations as original as they are beautiful. With Theresa Green's aesthetic voice quality, the aria was a successful finish to the impressionistic group.

In concluding her concert, the artist sang a group of folk songs. She sang them in tones of beauty and pathos difficult to equal. The highlight of these was the sweet and luring "Secorum Minuet." One of her encores was the song poem, "Nancy Hanks."

We, here in the sandhills region, are not critics in any authentic right, but we venture to say that we heard one of the truly great voices of today.

Street - Widening Into Court Again

(Continued from page 1) council has agreed to grant and delegate legislative and governmental powers which will be beyond the term of the present council.

"The city has further attempted to pledge the credit of the city and bind future councils by attempting to assume all damage to real property resulting from the construction work within the corporate limits and agreeing to defend the state in any and all property damage claims."

The Gatz - Arbutnot petition charges that street improvement district 16, established by the council, "shall be at public cost but said special assessments will be levied on the property especially benefited thereby."

The petition goes on to say that the council has publicly indicated its position on placing special assessments only on business properties and not against residential properties.

"Said agreement, if put in effect," the petition declares, "(would be) discriminatory against the peoples of the city of O'Neill."

"Said ordinance, as passed, is null and void and of no force for the reason it is vague and uncertain."

The petition continues: "The council has further agreed to pass ordinances in the future regulating parking or to widen to an ultimate 79 feet, at its own expense, thereby pledging moneys which future councils must raise and appropriate and which amounts are unknown at this time."

Gatz and Arbutnot claim the widening will result in removal of curb gas pumps "in connection with the Arbutnot Station, the Lohaus Motor company and with the Asimus Filling Station."

"This," the petition continues,

"is an attempt by the present council and state to bind future councils with condemnation proceedings or expenditures for damages done and is a delegation of governmental and legislative powers beyond their present term."

The city council must answer the petition by April 11.

State Engineer L. N. Ress and City Clerk O. D. French were named defendants in the original action, which was dismissed without prejudice, but are not named in the second petition.

Former City Attorney William W. Griffin in the original suit represented Ress, because Griffin is Holt county (state's) attorney. Griffin made it clear then he was acting only as Ress' attorney, not as defense attorney for the city.

Frederick Deutsch and George Dittrick, both of Norfolk, were retained by the council as defense attorneys in the original action.
