

'Farming for God' Makes Profit

By MRS. N. D. ICKES, SR.
The Frontier's Feature Writer

The young adult Sunday-school class of the Page Methodist church began a "farming for God" project April 8, 1954.

Under the leadership of the teacher, Harley Kennedy, 44 acres of oats and sweet clover were seeded that day on the Glenn Harris farm northeast of Page.

During the noon hour, a service of dedication of seed, soil and sowers was conducted by the pastor, Rev. Lisle Mewmaw.

On May 21 the group both planted and listed the remaining 56 acres of rented ground, thus completing the first stage of their cooperation with God for an oats and corn crop.

Various members of the class cultivated the corn as it was needed. The problem of cutting cockle burrs in the cornfields and the stubble was met at various times with a lunch of homemade ice cream and cake.

More than 600 bushels of oats were threshed August 9 for their share. They were stored at the Harris farm. About 300 bushels were donated to the harvest festival and sold November 2.

Over 1,000 bushels of corn as their share was picked November 20 and stored at the Harris farm and sold to Rollie Miller. The grain was delivered March 17 and 18.

This completed the farming project.

"The splendid cooperation of the men with their machinery made short work of each operation," according to Reverend Mewmaw.

The wives furnished the food and took turns serving the workmen at the noon meal at the Harris home and at the Marvin Stauffer home when it was inconvenient to do it at Harris.

The class has not made a final decision as to the disposition of their earnings but expect to put it to good use for the work of God's kingdom.

Tentative plans are being made to carry out a similar project this year.

Mrs. Earl Ralya Honored

Visiting Chorus, Banquet Top Week

Monday Full Day at Inman High

INMAN—Monday was a busy day at Inman public school. The Nebraska Wesleyan university male chorus, under the direction of Leonard Paulson, presented a program in the school auditorium. Mr. Paulson's a capella group was well-received by the audience of school children and visitors.

The program included "Stout Hearted Men" by Romberg; "March of the Musketeers" by Friml; and Barnby's "Give Me Your Tired, Your Poor." Probably the most popular selection on the program was "The William Tell Overture" on the harmonica by Toshiro Isa. Second in popularity, at least with the younger set, was a bass solo by Carlyle Weiss.

Monday found most high schoolers and members of the sixth, seventh and eighth grades at the Inman Methodist church annex where the annual athletic banquet was held at 7 o'clock. About 120 turned out to eat ham, enjoy the program and listen to a speech by Coach Jack Hughes.

Band members are practicing for their Friday night spring concert. This concert will serve three purposes. First, it will give Inman parents a chance to enjoy the band again; second, it will practice for the music contest at O'Neill, which the band has entered; and third, it will raise money to help pay the expenses of the band at the music contest.

Band Director Leonard Sawyer says he feels the band has made real progress for the short period it has been in existence and should make a fair showing at the contest.

A capacity crowd turned out Friday night for the senior class play, "The Night Owl." Principals in the play were Don Kelley as James Gray, a successful producer; Vicki Hutton, an authoress; Shirley Butterfield, the maid; Ron Wolfe, the caretaker; Richard Sobotka, a private detective.

Other players were Bob Reimers, Sharon Cunningham and Linelle Tompkins. The plot revolved around Vicki Hutton's attempt, as the authoress, to find inspiration for her new play and the efforts of her visitors to help her. The production was good for quite a few laughs.

Seniors May Talk to College Personnel

The seniors and their parents of Holt county will have the opportunity Tuesday, April 5, to meet and talk with representatives from the following colleges: Nebraska Wesleyan university, Hastings college, Midland college, Norfolk junior college, University of Nebraska, Yankton college, Chadron State Teachers' college, Wayne State Teachers' college, Creighton university, and Doane college.

O'Neill high school is sponsoring a senior-college day, event starting at 1:30 p.m., seniors of all Holt county high schools have indicated that they will attend. Each senior will have an opportunity to meet for 30 minutes with college representatives from colleges of their first, second and third choice.

There will also be recruiting officers here from the various armed services so that any interested people may talk with them. A representative from the Nebraska employment service at Norfolk will speak to the whole group on job opportunities and the services offered by their organization.

"It is felt that this type of a program will be beneficial to all seniors and their parents especially those that have questions concerning college work," O'Neill Supt. D. E. Nelson said.
