Train-Saving Bill Surprises Experts

LINCOLN — Sen. Frank Nelson's bill LB 554, which was given a rousing 27-11 vote Monday morning upon final reading, was a distinct surprise to the experts. Veteran legislative observers gave the Nelson bill meager chances when it was introduced. But the hard-working descendant of Denmark, who has operated a combination ranch-farm up Holt herded on the bill all the way, gaining momentum as the proposal moved along.
 Nelson was up against stubborn and powerful labor resistance, had virtually no help, and now LB 554 awaits only Governor Anderson's signature.
Inching Toward Close—
 The state legislature inched its way toward adjournment, bothered with budgets, highway revenues, and investigations the last.
 This week it took up its record-breaking budget bill, already providing $219 million for state agencies to spend and threatening to go over the $220 million mark. This figure—without property tax funds, cigarette, gasoline, and liquor tax revenues, tuition at state schools, and federal matching funds—is up $25 million from the previous biennial budget.
 About $11 million more in property tax income will be required. The general fund levy probably will have to be increased a little more than a mill to take up the slack (that is, $1 more tax per $1,000 of assessed valuation).
Where does it go?
 Sen. Hal Bredenberg of Dakota City, chairman of the budget committee, explained to the legislature that four major areas swallow up 86 percent of the total budget. They are: higher education (the University of Nebraska and the teachers' training colleges) $43,322,687; the public welfare (assistance) program, $33,194,900; and state penal, mental, and educational institutions $32,703,015.
 Bredenberg placed the blame for even higher budgets directly on the demands of the people for more and better services.
 "Such factors as inflation and growth in population alone would explain much of the upward spiral of expenditures, but primarily they have resulted from the demands of the people for more and better services," said Bredenberg.
 He added, "Without a reduction of services, a significant decrease in state expenditures will not be possible."

Ton-Mile Tax—
 The legislature, already weakened in battles over highways, took more good buffets.
 By a slim 22 to 17 vote the senators revived the controversial LB 362, which would place a ton-mile tax on the largest trucks.
 In another switch from previous action the legislature adopted the shortened version of the state highway system submitted by the state advisory highway commission. The vote was 23-18.
 Still up in the air was the question of whether an increase would saddle the tax on big trucks, their major competition, and have worked with various organizations to get the tax passed.
 The truckers through their Nebraska Motor Carriers association have bitterly resisted the effort since it was introduced. They succeeded in getting the bill killed late in May.
 But Sen. John Adams, Sr., of Omaha, who had voted to kill the bill, asked reconsideration and got the 22 votes to breathe life into the measure again. Later when he was criticized for jumping the fence, the Omaha legislator delivered an oration praising the railroads—and incidentally stripping the last facade off the real backers of the measure.
 The bill was eventually advanced 21-19. The margin was so small that at week's end it seemed nip-and-tuck that the bill would survive all the way.
 There were good arguments on both sides. Those for the bill said the big trucks should pay more of the share of highway construction and maintenance.
 Those against it said the trucks already are paying their way and that passage of the bill would destroy reciprocity agreements with other states. They would start charging a ton-mile tax on Nebraska trucks going through their states, increasing the costs to Nebraska shippers.
 Spokesmen for the truckers warned that this would drive trucking firms out of Nebraska. Paul Halpine, executive secretary of the motor carriers, predicted it would cost Nebraska $1 million in taxes and license fees.
Highway Map—
 Just as touch-and-go and every bit as filled with bitterness was the proposal for a shortened version of the highway system. The highway commission had proposed lopping off about 900 miles and adding 400 more for a net shortening of 500 miles. The legislature first adopted this map, then an hour later they junked it in favor of retaining the present system. Several days later they reconsidered and adopted the commission map again. This came over bitter protests of senators from districts losing the roads. They contended there should have been public hearings to show their people to state their cases.
School Lands—
 School land leaseholders groups, which had been skating on thin ice all session, finally lost out as the legislature killed the last of a group of bills trying to change the present system. Knocked out was LB 521, which had been killed in the committee and then revived on the floor. This measure called for a 25 percent cut in the rental of school lands, now leased at 6 percent per year of the appraised value set by the state board of educational lands and funds. The bill also called for setting up a "pilot" system of unit valuation—similar to share cropping. The feeling apparent was that it was too late in the session to try to work out anything so complicated.
Investigation—
 Hearings got underway on a probe by a special legislature investigation committee into alleged "improper practices" on the part of certain senators. The five man committee is headed by Sen. Robert Brower of Fullerton.
 The legislature launched the investigation after sworn testimony was offered in connection with introduction of a bill to tax coin vending machines. Sen. Sam

Klaver of Omaha has vigorously denied all statements mentioning him.
 However, the hearings opened with the bringing of witnesses from the Nebraska Mobilhomes association, a group of trailer court owners. They were questioned in connection with raising a $2,500 fund for fighting LB 8, a measure to regulate the trailer courts.
 This bill was favorably reported to the floor of the legislature on February 9 by the Government committee of which Sen. Klaver spearheaded a successful effort in his own committee to have the bill killed. Klaver explained he had learned the bill would be injurious to servicemen from Offutt air force base living in trailer courts near Omaha.
Osenbaughs Have Guests—
 Mrs. Maybelle Erickson and son, Ricky, and Mrs. Ruth Hilderhoff, Marjorie and Eddie, all of Mullen, came Sunday to visit Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Osenbaugh. Mrs. Erickson and Mrs. Hilderhoff returned on Monday to Mullen leaving the children here for a longer visit.
