C&NW Locomotive Derailed

A Chicago & North Western railroad diesel-powered freight locomotive was derailed about 3:30 a.m., Friday while switching on a sidetrack in the O'Neill yards during a storm. A faulty switch was blamed for sending one section of the locomotive one direction and the lead section another. The train was in reverse at the time, and when the front of the train failed to "track" it became derailed. In the proceedings some rails were twisted and bent (see arrow). The locomotive did not upset and traffic on the mainline was not affected.—The Frontier Photo.

Exhibit Wins

Rick Allen, 6-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Allen of Page, has the distinction of being one of the four in Holt county to receive an award for a free-hand drawing that placed in the art exhibit at Lincoln. Rick was a first grader in Mrs. Helen Braddock's room. The drawing is of the log cabin home of Abraham Lincoln. A unique feature was the well-defined path that leads by a circuitous route to a small building at the extreme far corner of the clearing, serving in lieu of modern plumbing and revealing keen observation for a small lad.

Walls Never Need Painting

These attractive, easy-to-clean bedroom walls combine planks and blocks of a new type of tongue and groove paneling. The Marlite paneling has a soft-lustrous baked finish in beautiful "companion colors" and authentic wood patterns, suitable for any room in the home. The prefinished paneling features a tongue and groove joint which makes fitting easy for the handyman or carpenter, whether building or remodeling. A saw, hammer and level are the only installation tools required. Available at lumber dealers, the baked plastic surface of the versatile paneling resists dirt, grease, heat and cosmetics. Fingermarks and smudges are quickly removed with a damp cloth, and the durable paneling never needs painting.
