Reds Plan Inundation of Orient

By ROMAINE SAUNDERS, Retired, Former Editor The Frontier

LINCOLN-Small black eyes, straight midnight | hair, unmistakable features of the Oriental, medium length from crown to sole, dressed in a skyblue suit, maybe got at Golds, and a smile that uncovered gleaming white teeth-all the earth has its smiles and its tears-English words of a sort responded to my greeting. A Korean, Told me his name was Pon, was here to arrange for entrance at Union college to take a course in business administration. His home is in South Korea, his mother is a physician and his father in transportation. They will finance his education in America and then he will return to his native land. He was to leave within a week for Chicago, Ill., where he has friends from his homeland and will have employment there until the college year opens in Sep-Romaine tember. He feels that uncertain Saunders peace in the Orient trembles in the balance and that Russia and China intend to inundate the Eastern world with waves of communist plans of life. "That the way of the kings of the East might be prepared . . . three unclean spirits like frogs came out of the mouth of the dragon and out of the mouth of the beast and out of the mouth of the false prophet . . . spirits of devils going forth to the kings of the earth to gather them to the battle of the great day of God Almighty." . . .

These mock evacuations when you come back to find things as you left them are one thing, while if you come back at all after a bombing to find only ruins is quite another.

Cane in hand, the old man shuffled along the sidewalk on the community's main thoroughfare. Ancient legs gave way and down he went to lie prone upon the concrete, a hard bed, covered his face with a hat to shield it from the blazing sun. An old man fallen, a nobody from one of those homes where old men who are homeless and penniless and friendless are cared for, with neither son nor daughter to lean upon, a broken human reed, a withered leaf-there he lay as cars rushed by and pedestrians came and went. What hopes, what aspirations, what visions beckoned when youth looked out upon a world to conquer lay there in the dust this morning? But kindly souls, helping hands are forever near. They raised the old man to his feet but he was unable to stand, so they carried him to an automobile parked at the curb and took him to the nursing home to be cared for.

. . . It was July 4, 1776. Hesitancy, indecision, doubting marked the assembly in that room in Philadelphia, Pa., after John Hancock had moved the adoption of the document that Thomas Jefferson had just read. Then arose John Witherspoon, delegate from New Jersey, and addressed the assembly. "There is a tide in the affairs of men. We perceive it now before us. To hesitate is to consent to our own slavery. That noble instrument upon your table should be subscribed this very morning by every pen in this house. He that will not respond to its accents and strain every nerve to carry into effect its provisions is unworthy the name of free man." The Declaration of Independence was signed by all delegates. The war was fought and won. The flag of freedom is respected and feared today the world around.

Having determined by official decree what and when and how much of the farm land shall be put to crops, now by legal enactment the hens are directed what kind of eggs to send to market. . . A 500-foot cross to be erected on an eminence in southern Illinois at a cost of three million dollars is being planned for. That amount of money devoted to the things the cross represents would be infinitely better than to be wrapped up in the cost of a stately monument. . . In the person of Budaich Ramazanov, a resident of the Russain Caucasus, the Muscovites claim another "first." He is said to be 132-years-old. Now comes a community down in Brazil to top the Russian claim with one of their citizens aged 148. . . Last year 656 tornados swept over America, killing 37 individuals, injuring 669 and causing $41,000,000 property damage.

Probably assuming that it is a contradiction of his real name, the editor adorns Hay McClure's name with quotation marks. Such marks have their place but not on Hay's name, it being full and complete as it is. Hay would do anything that could be done on a horse, but if he could not do it aboard a mount he would not do it. His father went into the mercantile business in O'Neill at one time with a gent from Nebraska City, Loss Amlong, as manager; Hay and his brother, Jim, clerks. Hay couldn't ride his saddle horse in the store, so he didn't last long as a clerk.

I had the pleasure this morning of a front lawn visit with a lady from O'Neill, Mrs. Fred Holsclaw. Passing the home of her daughter, Mrs. Merle Murdy, at 49th and Lowell streets, we met and I learned that she will be in Lincoln for a time to receive medical attention in a hospital. The home of the Holsclaw family was once the home of O'Neill's first "milk man," Dave Weisgarver, and at that time it was a farm home not included in the city limits. The monthly milk bill in those days for a family that did not keep their own cow was $1.50. The monthly milk bill of families here in the city these days of inflation is at least $25.

Dry May means a wet June - we have it. A farmer friend from Fillmore county informs this weather-wise prairielander that it had been very dry in his community but that recent rains assured them of at least half the normal yield of wheat. Corn planting was delayed by dry weather conditions but with favorable weather from now on he would have a near-average yield of corn. A lady asks why worry about corn, what is done with it when they get it? Her rural experience had been where grass and hay is the staple.

Guy Davis Great Leader

Guest editorial by Caroline Skopec, News Writer for Holt County 4-H Leaders' Organization

The 4-H movement lost one of its finest leaders Sunday when Guy R. Davis, 65, assistant state 4-H leader, was killed in an auto accident. Another assistant state leader, Mrs. Dorothea Hostein, suffered two broken legs and severe head injuries in the highway accident near Alliance.

They were returning to Lincoln after taking four exchange students to northwestern Nebraska and visiting Chadron 4-H conservation camp. Another passenger, Sharon Kykar of Lincoln, 11year-old niece of Mrs. Holstein, escaped with minor cuts and bruises.

Mr. Davis is survived by his wife, Marguerite; and two children, Mrs. James Stuart of Lincoln and Tom Davis, who is with the air force in Texas.

Mr. Davis was a pioneer in 4-H work. He received his bachelor's degree in 1912 from the University of Nebraska and his master's in 1914.

From 1914 to 1918, he taught at York college, then returned to the University of Nebraska. It was during this period that he helped set up the 4-H movement.

Mr. Davis was the assistant state 4-H leader who worked especially with the northern region of Nebraska. Thousands of 4-H'ers had the benefit of knowing him and share in the sorrow of losing a kind friend and a great leader.

Mr. Davis was truly a friend to every 4-H'er. He admired progressive boys and girls and dedicated his entire life to inspiring initiative in others. With his calm, soft-spoken voice, he surmounted obstacles which the extension service found in , its way.

Mr. Davis often visited Holt county. He helped with share-the-fun contests, achievement days, fairs and leaders' banquets. He remembered good leaders and a compliment from him was something of which to be proud.

At the first 4-H junior leaders' convention last October, Mr. Davis had charge of the introduction of the young leaders to a new safety project set up for the 4-H program this year. Mr. Davis was not only a pioneer in 4-H, but he worked endlessly to improve his organization. The finest memorial we, the 4-H'ers and leaders of Nebraska, can give Mr. Davis is to practice the safety measures that his latest program outlines. It is irony, indeed, that he should die in an inexplicable one-car automobile accident.

We can not always appreciate a truly great leader until he is gone. Then we search for someone to fill his place and because we find that no one can, we must follow the path that he has trod. If we are good leaders youth no doubt will break new paths similar to the magnificent pattern set by Guy Davis.

Shaken Faith Biggest

Undoubtedly the biggest consequence of the

the mass production of the vaccine. The degree of potency is apparently not consistent enough to satisfy medical men. Some of the stuff is too strong while other is too weak.

Now government health authorities have run exhaustive tests on each batch of the vaccine and slowly but surely it is being released for public use. That which is being issued is all right-just a good and safe as the public first believed it to be when the announcement was made that Dr. Jonas Salk had struck a deadly blow at a crippling disease.

But throughout the nation there are parents who have lost their faith in the vaccine. Some of them will probably refuse to allow their children to be immunized. Some of these children will probably be polio victims before the year is over.

It is too bad that this rather natural confusion had to come about. But it is far more tragic that some of our people will have lost faith in the entire Salk procedure.

Concerned About Balance

How times have changed. President Benjamin Harrison was so worried about the 43-million-dollar surplus in the federal budget that he said in his 1889 state of the Union message: "The presence of so large a surplus in the public vault is a disturbing element in the conduct of public business." Now Representative William H. Harrison of Wyoming, who's a grandson of the former president, is a bit amazed at the change-275 billion in the red, which does not count more billions in various types of credit expansion outstanding. Interest on the public debt is 61/2 billion a year, 171/2 million dollars a day or $12,500 a minute. It will be good business when Uncle Sam starts to live within his income, also lowers taxes.

Who remembers when the average teenage kid was happy to mow your lawn (manually-powered machine) for a half-buck? Try finding one to touch a power mower for several times that amount.

You drop the side windows down on this airy beauty of a Buick with the solid steel roof-and it's as wide open as a Convertible, with no center posts to mar your view.

That's what makes it a hardtop.

But what makes it a very special kind of hardtop is the fact that it has four doors instead of two.

Cheers? Brother! - they're really rolling out for Buick's 4-Door Riviera!

Now, you see, you can have the tremendously popular styling of a true hardtop combined with the room, comfort and full convenience of a 4-door Sedan.

And it took a completely new kind of body design to come up with this marvel-a new kind of body built to wholly new structural principles.

So it looks like Buick's done it again -
