Time Again to Pack Lunches

By BLANCHE SPANN PEASE, Homemaking Editor

Before we can turn around many a rural mother will be thinking about packing school lunches once again. Also, it's still picnic and sandwich time.

No need to forego parties and social get-togethers when the mercury climbs. For your afternoon ice tea party make honey-orange spread. The kids may enjoy this for a school lunch, too.

Spread it on flavorful nut bread. Combine one-third ounce package of softened cream cheese, one tablespoon honey and teaspoon grated orange rind. Mix until creamy.

Here's another idea for school or party lunches. It's a quick-energy snack, just what the children need. It's called:

HONEY BUTTER CRUNCH SANDWICHES

To make enough filling for four sandwiches, combine one-half cup peanut butter, one-fourth cup orange juice and one-fourth cup honey. Mix until smooth. Add one-fourth cup chopped pecans, spread on enriched bread and top with a lettuce leaf.

If you planning a party luncheon, a festive sandwich loaf is nice. Use an unsliced loaf of day old enriched sandwich bread from the bakery. Trim crusts and slice the loaf into five layers lengthwise. Between each two layers, spread your favorite sandwich fillings—tuna salad, egg salad, crabmeat salad and cheese spreads. Frost the filled loaf with softened cream cheese thinned to spreading consistency. Chill in refrigerator several hours before serving. Garnish with radish slices.

Ever heard of Submarine sandwich? It's an epicure's delight. Make it like this:

Purchase a loaf of French bread from the bakery. Split the crusty loaf in half—lengthwise and spread with butter or margarine. Then, fill prepared loaf with as many different kinds of cheese and sausage or meat as you like. Put in tomato slices, cucumber slices and green onion, too, for freshness. Before replacing the top of the loaf, sprinkle the filling with French dressing.

'Tizzy' Wins—Dear Blanche:

I know you are busy as a one armed paper hanger and so am I, trying to can and freeze plenty of food for my large family for the forthcoming winter.

I thought I would try to grab enough time to earn a three-months subscription and pass along some canning recipes for others to try.

Our kids like mustard pickles and I use the following method: One pint of small cucumbers, one pint of large cucumbers (sliced), one pint of pickling onions, one cup string beans (cut in half inch slices), one pint small green tomatoes, one pint cauliflower (cut in small pieces), three red peppers (chopped), three green peppers (chopped), one cup small carrots (sliced).

All vegetables should be tender. Soak in brine (one cup salt to one gallon water) overnight. Drain and soak in clear water for three hours. Mix a sufficient amount of vinegar and water in equal quantities to cover the vegetables. Let stand for an hour and then heat to the simmering point.

Make dressing by mixing: 1/4 cup white sugar, four tablespoons flour 1/2 tablespoon turmeric, one teaspoon celery salt, four tablespoons powdered mustard. Add three pints hot vinegar slowly, stirring to make a smooth paste. Cook the mixture over a pan of hot water until the sauce thickens.

Drain the vegetables thoroughly. Pour the mustard dressing over while they are hot and simmer for five minutes. Pack pickles into hot, sterilized glass jars and seal tightly, at once.

I'll pass along the way I make tomato catsup, too. It may help someone as it is shorter than some methods of making it.

TOMATO CATSUP

Six pounds of tomatoes (half peck), three red peppers (sliced and seeds removed), two medium sized onions, two tablespoons salt, 1/3 cup sugar, two teaspoons celery salt, two teaspoons ground mustard, one tablespoon whole allspice, one tablespoon cloves, one tablespoon cinnamon, one teaspoon paprika, two cups vinegar.

Cook the tomatoes, peppers and onions together without adding water. Press through a strainer and measure the pulp. To pulp (four quarts) add the salt, sugar and spices. Tie the whole spices loosely in a bag during the cooking, and remove the bag before pouring the catsup into the jars. Ground spices except paprika will darken the catsup. Rapid cooking (being careful not to scorch catsup) will give a better color than slow cooking. Cook ingredients, except the vinegar, rapidly for an hour, add vinegar and cook mixture until thick. Pour, while very hot into hot sterilized jars or bottles at once.

Check Bounces After 209-Mile Taxi Haul to Holt

STUART — A down-hearted cabbie from Omaha hoped for the quick return of a free-spending, generous-tipping gent who wrote a bum check to cover a trip to Stuart — 209 miles from Omaha.

Detective Sgt. Charles Crick of Omaha gave this account: The man hired a cab at 3 a.m. Monday, August 15, for a round of night stops. After several stops, he said he was out of money but asked the cabbie to drive him to Valentine. Instead, he was taken to cab headquarters where officials quoted the price of a fare to the town.

The man balked but agreed on the price of $92 to Stuart. Then he went to a downtown hotel and had a clerk fill out a check which he signed with an illegible scrawl.

He returned to the cab company, deposited the check and was driven to his destination. The check bounced for two reasons. The man had no account and the check was for two amounts—one hundred dollars and $102—written into different places on the check.

Detective Crick said the extra money was to have been a tip.
