'Homegrown' Movie Pleases Audience

ly attracted to the attention of the viewer of the film.

Unlike the conventional films, the love angle is strictly secondary. The high points, photographically speaking, are the towering golden rods waving in the sun, the glimpses of wildlife in the hayfield and on the sandhills lakes. The camera studies a civet cat perched in a tree, a water snake slithering along the sandy shore of the Elkhorn and, finally, into the water. Mack (the dog) steals a few scenes and the viewer almost smells the newly mown hay and the branding iron.

The emphasis continually is on the wholesome life of the sandhills 4-H'er, including the competitive showing and selling at the Tri-County fair at Stuart.

The bluegrass and hayting sequences, alone, are worthy documentary stories.

There is original music including "The Song of the West," "The Tune of the Whittier" and "Johnny Hayseed."

The entire cast includes Skopec neighbors plus familiar faces of Stuart and Atkinson businessmen and the host of 4-Hers who are incorporated in activity scenes.

Mr. Skopec won't say but it's a fair guess the versatile farmer-rancher has several thousand dollars tied up in the production. He's very modest about the whole effort.

"Let's give those folks credit who have gone along with us—the neighbors and friends for their goodwill; bankers, lawyers and townspeople who have contributed time and talent. Except for them we wouldn't have a film," explains Mr. Skopec.

About the agricultural scenes he says: "They are a part of our living prairie. We try to show them as we see them."

Oh yes, the love story. Dick and Caroline have just taken part in the hay days parade. Mack is along. They purchase hamburgers at a stand and go hand-in-hand up Atkinson's

Main street.

The dog snatches the last bite of the sandwich from Caroline's hand about the time Dick suggests fixing up the dilapidated Whittier ranch house.

The proposal is that subtle and is accepted on the same basis. That climaxes "The New Frontier."

Farley-Tushla post of the American Legion sponsored the premiere showing.

Mr. Skopec is planning other showings throughout the area. All that is necessary is a room, a sponsor and an invitation.
