George Page Dies on West Coast

Last Living Member of Family

He was the last member of the family for whom the town of Page was named. He was born 66 years ago in the Page homestead, where Mrs. Rose Chichester and son, Elbert, now reside.

His father, W. W. Page, built and operated the first general store, known for many years as the Hunter and Gray store.

His mother was the first postmaster and the postoffice was named after the Page family. The postoffice desk was in the store.

Mrs. Page was also the first teacher and presided over the pupils who attended the first school—a soddy built on land leased from Ranson Hunter, grandfather of John Gray. The lease was made for 99 years and cost the school district $1 a year for the acre of ground under lease.

Among George Page's schoolmates are Mrs. Lou Heiss, Mrs. Jennie French, Mr. and Mrs. John Gray, Mr. and Mrs. Rollie Snell, Mrs. Nell Stevens, Mrs. Allen Haynes, Mrs. Nellie Storm, Elmer Reed, Mrs. Dora Townsend and Mrs. Myrtle Fleming.

W. W. Page operated a general store and a blacksmith shop and served as county surveyor for many years. He was one of the donors of land for the Page townsite.

One brother DeWitt, and three sisters, Ruth, Phoebe and Lydia preceded the late George Page in death.
