MRS. MARY BROWN, 94, RECALLS

Ewing-to-California Via Wagon

EWING—Mrs. Mary Brown of Ewing, Calif., recently celebrated her 94th birthday anniversary at her home at Carbondale. A celebration in her behalf has been held annually for the past 10 years. Friends and relatives called, she received many cards, letters and gifts, including three birthday cakes. A dinner was served at 1:30 p.m., and the afternoon was spent visiting and reminiscing. Mrs. Brown was born in Berkshire, Germany, on February 22, 1862. She came to America when she was 19-years-old with her mother and her younger brother, Frank. They settled at Ewing. She was married in December, 1884, to Frank Brown. With their four small children, his father and mother, and 11 brothers, the Browns set out in 1891 for California by wagon train. They settled at Elk Grove. Mr. Brown started working for Mrs. Wilson on what is known as the McCone

At the time of the fractured hip she was hospitalized from June until the following February. Her daughter, Jennie Brown, resides at Ewing, Calif., box 94. Later, the Browns moved to

Conserving Our Resources

Conservation of the earth's resources is everybody's business, regardless of where we live. Our very life depends on a thin firm soil and the living things it supports. We have many kinds of soil due to many factors such as parent material, climate conditions, topography, and age of the land. Subsoil is made up of water, air, rock materials, and organic matter. Man has destroyed nature's protective covering by cutting down forests and plowing up land, exposing it to the full forces of wind and wind erosion. After every rain the water rushes off the sloping land, carrying with it precious topsoil and plant food. Erosion can be checked and controlled by good land management practices such as contour strip cropping, terracing, gully control, mulching, grass breaks, use of cover crops, grassland improvement and reforestation. We must remember that soil is not the only resource of conservation. It is the full forces of water, grass and wildlife, too. Water, grass and forest conservation all work much together. Nature has many ways of conserving water and of controlling it to prevent too rapid evaporation. 47,000 Trees and Shrubs to be Planted— Approximately 47,000 trees and shrubs will be planted as wildlife cover in Holt county this spring. The Holt county soil conservation district is cooperating with the state game commission and will be planting the game cover areas this spring. By having the various soil conservation districts plant the game areas, it is hoped to get the trees planted sooner and thus encourage greater survival. Each year, about this time, the game commission receives several requests for trees for spring planting. In most cases the planting stock has all been allotted and late requests cannot be filled. Although it is difficult to anticipate tree planting needs a year in advance, it is the only way of insuring that you will receive trees the following spring. Therefore, if you are thinking of planting a wildlife area but did not have your request in for the 1956 quota, send your requests in now. You will be contacted sometime during the summer for the following spring's planting. Send your requests to the state game commission office at Bassett or contact the SCS office or county agent at O'Neill.
