

Moving Transformer Big Job

Moving a 110-ton transformer over Nebraska country roads presents problems to Nebraska Public Power System workers. In these photos they are shown unloading the huge transformer, Nebraska's largest, from the specially-built railroad flatcar (above) onto two lowboy trucks, and then inching the heavy load over shored-up bridges and around corners (below) to its position in the new Northeast Lincoln substation.

Benefit Dance Helps Hike Lorenz Fund

(Continued from page 1) dependent — will officially close at 3 p.m. Tuesday, July 31. The O'Neill National bank and First National bank are cooperating with the newspapers in the movement and are receiving the money, which will be placed in a trust fund. Lorenz, who has had 1 1/2 years of college, hopes to become a teacher and will use the money toward that end.

The Ash Grove community hall will be the scene of a benefit dance Friday night, July 27. A freewill offering will be taken and proceeds turned into the Lorenz fund.

If you or your organization have not yet given to the fund, why not do so without delay? Only a few more days remain.

It's all for the benefit of an armless fellow who has demonstrated rare courage and determination and yet can still smile.

Early Students Wanted at Reunion

Wayne College Once Private School

By MRS. N. D. ICKES, SR., Frontier's Feature Writer
A picnic will be held at Wayne Sunday, August 5, for those who have attended college there. Special invitations are directed to the earlier students to make an effort to be present, bringing families, comparing notes and reminiscing with old acquaintances.

Wayne State college was founded by J. M. Pile, who also was president of what was then the Nebraska Normal college. It was a private school from November 11, 1891, when the first classes were held in the old laundry building on Main street, until it was purchased by the state on September 1, 1910.

It was a struggle to keep the school going in those years known as the "nineties." At eight cents per bushel, a crop of corn would not go far toward paying a year's schooling. Corn was bought and used for fuel. It is said that the cribs of corn piled up there and used for fuel were many. This showed an inclination on the part of the management to make the burden as easy as possible for students. Wood was also taken in as barter. Fuel was very important because it required a lot to heat the four floors of the first building.

For two years the only fuel used was ear corn. Agricultural products as well as livestock were received as part or full payment for the term.

The original building was dedicated September 5, 1892. The following supplies were purchased and constituted the first equipment: One set of maps; one set of anatomical charts; one 12-inch globe; 100 chairs, wooden bottom; three tables, 3 1/2 by 8 ft.; one chapel organ; two hanging lamps; two dozen erasers.

The first student to register was Agnes Paul (now Mrs. Harvey E. Mason of Meadow Grove).

From these humble beginnings have come into being what is now the Wayne State Teachers college, which some regard as one of the midwest's most beautiful campuses.

For many it has become a family tradition to attend the college so that successive generations claim it as their alma mater.
