Chocolate Dessert For Dieters

This Chocolate Refrigerator Cake is delightful to look at and heavenly to eat, yet it's low, low in calories. We've calorie-streamlined the recipe so that it contains one-third less calories than the original recipe that inspired it. Secret is that we've used the non-calorie sweetener, Sucaryl, to replace all of the sugar normally required. This sweetener with its natural, sugar-like taste makes it simple to whittle unnecessary calories from many cooked and baked dishes. And you won't sacrifice one bit of good eating, for you just can't taste the difference.

Chocolate Refrigerator Cake (Low-Calorie)

- |  |                                 |
|--|---------------------------------|
| 1 1/2 teaspoons unflavored gelatin                   | 2 squares unsweetened chocolate |
| 1 tablespoon Sucaryl solution or 24 tablets, crushed | 4 eggs, separated               |
| Pinch of salt  | 1 teaspoon vanilla              |
| 1/2 cup water  | 1/4 cup ice water               |
|  | 1/4 cup nonfat dry milk solids  |
|  | 3 lady fingers, split           |

Combine gelatin, Sucaryl, salt, water, and chocolate in top of double boiler. Cook over hot water until gelatin dissolves and chocolate is melted. Remove from heat; add egg yolks one at a time, beating well after each addition. Return to top of double boiler and cook for 2 minutes. (Mixture will become very thick and cling in a ball in center of pan.) Remove from heat; add vanilla. Chill in refrigerator for 15 minutes. Meanwhile, combine egg whites, ice water and dry milk solids; beat on high speed of mixer until consistency of whipped cream. Carefully fold into the cooled chocolate mixture. Line a loaf pan (7 x 3 x 2-inches) with waxed paper. Place lady fingers around edges of pan. Carefully pour in chocolate mixture and chill until firm.

Makes 6 servings. Each serving contains 129 CALORIES; 7.4 grams protein; 8.9 grams fat; 7 grams carbohydrate. If made with sugar, each serving would contain 193 CALORIES.

Letters to Editor

Bristow, Nebr.

It might help people to better understand K-12 if we take a specific example. I must of necessity use Boyd county.

The county reorganization committee is organized of rural and town, but unfortunately the rural, due to the press of work cannot attend as regularly as town members.

The state understands that the committee contains so many farmers, so to do their thinking Lincoln (Nebraska state department of education) sends four men to study the county and tell the people what they should do.

In this case they sent Floyd G. Parker, director, school building service, department of education, state house; Donald O. Busch, consultant, school building services and school district reorganization, department of education, state house; Allen A. Elliott, director school lunch program, department of education, state house; Leroy Ortengen, director, secondary education and coordination of school visitation, department of education, state house.

They came, they saw, they presented a 24-page study of Boyd county with recommendations.

So you see how much reliance is to be placed on the statements about the county reorganization committee and what they do and their authority.

The state recommended the north part of Holt county to be joined to Boyd county for school purposes. It recommended the combined area to be divided into two districts, an east and a west district. It did not name them but it projected these by circles centered in certain towns so we may suppose these were the locations. It also pinpoints them in discussion of transportation.

On page 21 they say "the only place where additional elementary attendance units (rural schools) would need to be established is the area south of the Niobrara river in Holt county —

This need will change as people with children move into or out of this area — however, should not present a problem since the entire area would be under a large administration unit — and study problem and provide a solution each year."

Boyd county lies entirely north of the Niobrara so we see it is to be serviced by the encircled towns of Lynch and Butte.

In northern Holt county there possibly might be a very few "additional elementary attendance units."

These "units" would not be the concern of the people there, but of the K-12 district wherever they would be attached. These units would be subject to change on a yearly basis at the discretion of outsiders.

So much for the idea we might keep the rural schools. We will do as we are told, period.

I believe in a report on Richardson county it told they had nine schools K to 12, 84 rural schools. This was being reorganized into 6 schools, three high schools. Schools to run from 750 to 1,500 pupils.

Here are some facts for rural people to think over.

Farm population only 35 percent of population of Nebraska, yet farm property represents 57 percent taxpaying property of the state.

Farm income has been dropping for years and Dr. E. B. Schmidt, in his bulletin on taxes, forecasts it will go lower.

In Boyd county in these districts whenever a town family pays $1 in taxes the farm family will pay $5—one to five.

I am secretary of district 69, consisting of mostly rural property plus the village of Gross where the school is located.

Thirty-six Boyd districts already have joined the Nebraska Small Schools association and have paid over $700 to finance that group's fight against enforced redistricting.

Yours truly,

FLOYD KELLY
