Wind Cripples Power, Phone Lines

DORSEY—A very hard wind hit this community Sunday, July 7, uprooting trees and putting power lines and telephone lines out of commission. The power lines were out for around six hours and the telephone lines were unserviceable for a day or so. Some of the phone lines still haven't been repaired.

A severe hail storm swept an area from Sunshine Bottom near Lynch across the country into Knox county. The strip was about three miles east of the old Dorsey post office extending on farther southeast for several miles.

A hard rain accompanied the storm with water being trapped in some dams that never before have had water.

The heavy rain washed some fields doing as much damage as the hail did. The strip of hail was about three miles wide and the length not known exactly. Some of the farmers who have seen several severe hail storms say it was the widest and longest that they can recall.

Several bridges and some of the roads had to be repaired before the mail could get through in the Knox county area.

The Frank Svoboda farm which is about one mile east of the Redbird bridge on the Boyd county side, was severely hit. The buildings except the house, the Kaasa hanger was destroyed.
