WHAT MAKES AMERICA GREAT?

None of us need be told that the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution, and the Bill of Rights are unique documents.

These instruments, so meaningful to every American, for the first time in history put emphasis on the individual.

"We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness." So reads our Declaration.

No longer was the individual subservient to the state or any subdivision of government. Paramount were his rights to be governed only in the interest of the welfare of the entire citizenry.

Emphasis on the individual is another of the many things that makes America great.
