Cornea Transplant Proves Success

cornea). She could see well—thanks to the transplant.
She guards the new cornea carefully, however, by not exposing it to bright light and to cold. And the new eye is "coming along fine!"

Mrs. Meyer contacted The Frontier after hearing "Voice of The Frontier" broadcasts last week urging persons to buy brooms during the Lions club-sponsored "broomerama".
Lions in Iowa and Nebraska are raising funds for an eye bank to help provide persons with new corneas.
Good eyes are taken from persons moments after their death (with prior approval) and the corneas are frozen pending the transplant. Lions have lined up state highway patrols and airplanes to speed the frozen corneas to persons needing a transplant, or speeding persons needing the transplant to a medical center where the job can be done. Mrs. Meyer wanted to convey encouragement to anyone in WJAG's listening audience.

"If my other eye fails me completely, I'll go through another transplant as quickly as it can be arranged," she told Cal Stewart in a tape-recorded interview in her home (heard on Monday's "Voice of The Frontier" program).
Mrs. Meyer and her husband, who live immediately east of the Clearwater baseball park, financed her transplant.
Mrs. Meyer said the reason no anesthetic is used is because of the nature of the surgery.
"There must be no body motion whatsoever, else the delicate surgery will fail."
Surgeons are confronted with "hooking up" the cornea with the brain and with the other eye.
The Meyers purchased a dwelling here built by Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Contois, who subsequently have built a home in O'Neill.
The transplant technique is about three years old, Mrs. Meyer said.
The Meyers' children are Mrs. Ray Filsinger of Clearwater, Mrs. Roy Blunt of Ewing, Reuben of Neigh and Mrs. Dwain Hamilton of Omaha. They have 10 grandchildren.
